Integrated Lifecycle Services for Persons with Disabilities David L. Lovett, Kathryn A. Haring, 2012-12-06 The field of education is under pressure both external and internal to improve the services provided to all students In American society and elsewhere there is a concern that current educational practices fail to adequately prepare many students to be productive citizens There has been a call for educational services that are more responsive to the needs of students that use effective educational practices that involve parents and the local community and that adequately prepare teachers to assume more professional roles Over the last several decades special educators have addressed these and other critical issues as they relate to students with disabilities The knowledge gained from these endeavors can be useful in the reshaping of schools for all students those with disabilities and those without Indeed this information may be useful for services beyond school whether for young children or adults This volume has been written to address how people with disabilities can be effectively served in settings with their nondisabled peers Because many of the students who are not well served by current educational practices have similar needs as students with disabilities it is anticipated that some of this information may be useful in the discussion regarding the reshaping of educational systems It is also anticipated that the material presented will help in the design of more effective coordinated systems that serve people with disabilities throughout their lives

Voices of Pineland Stephen T. Murphy, 2011-07-01 Voices of Pineland Eugenics Social Reform and the Legacy of Feeble-mindedness in Maine by Stephen Murphy tells the story of the Maine School for the Feeble-minded later known as Pineland Hospital and Training Center Based on an in depth analysis of annual institutional reports newspaper clippings legal documents and other archival sources as well as interviews with former residents their family members and staff Murphy traces the history of the Maine institution from its founding in 1908 to its eventual closure in 1996 Prior to 1908 Maine sent many of its citizens with intellectual and developmental disabilities to Massachusetts When the state established the Maine School for the Feeble-minded it modeled it after an institution in Massachusetts that had been the first asylum for so-called idiots in the United States Murphy shows the influences of both social forces and the personalities of superintendents elected officials and eventually lawyers advocates and court officials on Pineland's history Voices of Pineland is more than the story of Maine's institution for the feeble-minded though It provides a lens through which to view the history of people with intellectual disabilities in twentieth century America The founding of the Maine School for the Feeble-minded was a product of the eugenics fervor that swept the country around the turn of the century and continued for several decades The feeble-minded were seen as a cause of a broad range of social problems and a threat to the social order Like other states Maine turned to the institution and later involuntary sterilization to prevent the feeble-minded from spreading their alleged defective genes The population of the Maine school steadily grew and the institution soon became overcrowded and understaffed As early as 1938 charges of abuse and neglect at the institution were reported in the press This predated the flurry of exposes on state schools and mental hospitals in the national media including Life magazine and Reader's Digest in the post World War II era

Severe Behavior Disorders in the Mentally Retarded Rowland P. Barrett, 2013-11-22 It is well known that behavior problems are a salient characteristic of children and adults with mental retardation That is not to say that all persons with mental retardation experience behavior disorders however most studies indicate that the incidence of emotional disturbance in this population is four to six times greater than that observed in similar intellectually nonhandicapped children and adults It is equally well known that the principal form of treatment accorded clients with mental retardation and behavior disorders is pharmacotherapy or the prescription of behavior modifying drugs Recent studies show that 6 out of every 10 individuals with mental retardation have been prescribed drugs as treatment for disorders of emotion or behavior Unfortunately further studies indicate that only one or 2 out of every 10 clients receiving medication are determined to be responders such that some therapeutic benefit is derived from their drug treatment As noted by the title the single major thrust of this volume is to review approaches to the treatment of behavior disorders in persons with mental retardation from a nondrug perspective This requires the presentation of a wide range of material on treatment basic behavior modification programming cognitive behavioral strategies habilitative approaches counseling and psychotherapy designing therapeutic living environments managing medical factors bearing relevance to emotional illness intervening with families training special education teachers and direct care staff and supplying information on the client's rights to obtain treatment in the least restrictive and least intrusive manner

Mental Retardation in the Year 2000 Louis Rowitz, 2012-12-06 When you look at the advances in the field of mental retardation over the past 30 years it is hard to imagine that more change is inevitable Yet I think back to the time when early in his presidency President Kennedy called together the brightest scientists researchers doctors and educators to develop a comprehensive plan for the nation to effectively care for treat educate and house persons with mental retardation In the early 1960s the call for new research into the causes and the amelioration of mental retardation the development of community based programs and the development of family care for appropriate education vocational training and jobs were seen as revolutionary But in the 30 years since then we have seen time and time again that it is persons with mental retardation themselves who have led the way When the schools were opened to them they learned more than any one ever thought possible when vocational training was provided they learned skills that led to jobs when employment became available they proved to be good steady workers who earned money and paid taxes When the playing fields were made available to them through programs such as Special Olympics they showed the world they could train and compete and WIN in the sports of the Olympics When communities welcomed them they became our neighbors They have earned the right to play on any field to study in any school to hold a paying job and to be anyone s neighbor
