The second volume of William Cullen Bryant's letters opens in 1836 as he has just returned to New York from an extended visit to Europe to resume charge of the New York Evening Post brought near to failure during his absence by his partner William Leggett's mismanagement. At the period's close Bryant has found in John Bigelow an able editorial associate and astute partner with whose help he has brought the paper close to its greatest financial prosperity and to national political and cultural influence. Bryant's letters of the years between show the versatility of his concern with the crucial political, social, artistic, and literary movements of his time and the varied friendships he enjoyed despite his preoccupation with a controversial daily paper and with the sustenance of a poetic reputation yet unequaled among Americans. As president of the New York Homeopathic Society in letters and editorials urging widespread public parks and in his presidency of the New York Society for the Abolition of the Punishment of Death he gave attention to public health, recreation, and order. He urged the rights of labor, foreign and religious minorities, and free African Americans. His most powerful political effort of the period was in opposition to the spread of slavery through the conquest of Mexico. An early commitment to free trade in material goods was maintained in letters and editorials and to that in ideas by his presidency of the American Copyright Club and his support of the efforts of Charles Dickens and Harriet Martineau to secure from the United States Congress and international copyright agreement. Included here are letters to prominent Americans many of them his close friends such as the two Danas, Bancroft, Cole, Cooper, Dewey, Dix, Downing, Durand, Forrest, Greenough, Irving, Longfellow, Simms, Tilden, Van Buren, and Weir. His letters to the Evening Post recounting his observations and experiences during travels abroad and in the South West and Northeast of the United States which were copied widely in other newspapers and praised highly by many of their subscribers are here made available to the present-day reader. List of Secondary Schools in England Recognized by the Board of Education as Efficient Great Britain.
