Understanding and Managing Behaviors of Children with Psychological Disorders Jered B. Kolbert, Laura M. Crothers, 2012-09-27 In the vast literature on classroom behavior management there are no texts that offer a set of behavior management strategies specific to various psychopathology issues in children and adolescents This book provides a clear useful resource for educators who wish to either prevent or diminish problem behaviors exhibited in the classroom Readers are presented with a brief description of various mental health diagnoses including children on the autistic spectrum with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder depression anxiety oppositional defiant disorder and many others After reviewing the features of each particular disorder the book then offers a set of classroom management techniques designed to help educators target the associated problematic behaviors Each chapter is written by an expert in that specific field and strategies are provided for use with a variety of ages from early childhood to adolescence Educators will find this to be an essential tool for working with children and adolescents with a variety of mental health and behavioral disorders in the classroom

Appraisal Processes in Emotion Klaus R. Scherer, Angela Schorr, Tom Johnstone, 2001-05-03 The scientific study of emotion has long been dominated by theories emphasizing the subjective experience of emotions and their accompanying expressive and physiological responses The processes by which different emotions are elicited has received less attention the implicit assumption being that certain emotions arise automatically in response to certain types of events or situations. Such an assumption is incompatible with data showing that similar situations can provoke a range of emotions in different individuals or even the same individual at different times. Appraisal theory first suggested by Magda Arnold and Richard Lazarus was formulated to address this shortcoming in our understanding of emotion. The central tenet of appraisal theory is that emotions are elicited according to an individual's subjective interpretation or evaluation of important events or situations. Appraisal research focuses on identifying the evaluative dimensions or criteria that predict which emotion will be elicited in an individual as well as linking the appraisal process with the production of emotional responses. This book represents the first full scale summary of the current state of appraisal research. Separate sections cover the history of appraisal theory and its fundamental ideas, the views of some of the major theorists currently active in the field, theoretical and methodological problems with the appraisal approach including suggestions for their resolution, social, cultural and individual differences and the application of appraisal theory to understanding and treating emotional pathology and the methodology used in appraisal research including measuring and analyzing self-report, physiological, facial and vocal indicators of appraisal and simulating appraisal processes via computational models. Intended for advanced students and researchers in emotion psychology, it provides an authoritative assessment and critique of the current state of the art in appraisal research.

Resilience and the Virtue of Fortitude Craig Steven Titus, 2006-11. The present study employs the thought of Thomas Aquinas and his sources on fortitude and its related virtues while taking his dialogical method as a basis for critically appropriating reflections from other perspectives as well. The book offers a renewed classic vision of the human person and the ordering of the sciences as read through the complementary and at one level corrective insights of empirical psychosocial studies on resilience. Such a vibrant natural law approach to ethical norms and moral development offers guidelines and a framework for understanding human resilience. Moreover, it recognizes a theological transformation of such human capacities: a spiritual resilience by proposing the New Law of grace, Christ's teaching and the infused virtues as vital bases for Christian ethics. Craig Steven Titus is research professor at the Institute for the Psychological Sciences as well as lecturer and researcher at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland.

Career Barriers Manuel London, 2014-02-25. This volume's goal is to help readers understand how people react to career barriers and how people develop constructive ways of coping with them. Drawing on original cases and data from interviews with people who faced different types of career barriers, the author describes how people react to and make sense of unfortunate events in their lives and career barriers when they occur. He considers how and why some people cope constructively while others don't and explores how resilience and support from others help get us through tough times and emerge with a sense of renewal and career growth. He suggests how we can manage career barriers and prepare for or even prevent career barriers through foresight planning and education. These methods also suggest what managers and organizations should do to help their employees who are or may soon be facing career barriers. People can learn while facing the stress and self questioning that accompany career barriers but this is not an easy process Learning requires considerable self understanding and environmental support The organization can play a vital role in limiting people s pain and creating opportunities However despite generous severance packages and outplacement services many organizations have been little help to people who lose their jobs suffer job stress face unreasonably demanding bosses or suffer from physical handicaps or chronic illnesses Most of the burden falls on individuals and their families Assistance can and should come from employers government agencies educational institutions and religious organizations While the book focuses on the perspectives of people who have been or may be affected by career barriers the material should be of interest to a broad range of readers in particular academics who study careers practitioners in the fields of training and development and government officials who set public policy that affects displaced workers
