The Major Powers In Northeast Asian Security:

The Major Powers in Northeast Asian Security Ralph A. Cossa,1996 The Major Powers of Northeast Asia Tae-Hwan Kwak,Edward A. Olsen,1996 The remnants of Cold War politics stand in the way of Northeast Asia's adjustment to the post Cold War era This book examines the security policies of Japan China Russia the US and Australia in the Northeast Asia region with reference to attempts to reunify the two Koreas Major Powers and Future Security in Northeast Asia ,1994 The Major Powers in Northeast Asia Tae-Hwan Kwak,Edward A. Olsen,1996 The Major Powers in Northeast Asia Tae-Hwan Kwak,Edward A. Olsen,1996 The Major Powers In Northeast Asian Security... McNair Paper 51... U.S. Department Of Defense National Defense University,1998* Major Power Relations in Northeast Asia; Win-Win or Zero-Sum Game David M. Lampton,2001-10 Three countries China Japan and the United States and relations among them are likely to have a disproportionate impact on prospects for peace and prosperity in Asia Pacific in the twenty first century If the differences among these major actors are managed successfully the prospects for the region are bright indeed Conversely if the three fail to manage their relationship successfully or if relations between any two of the parties are seen to threaten the third the risks for the region and beyond will increase dramatically The Balance of Power in Asia-Pacific Security Liselotte Odgaard,2007-01-24 Investigating the dynamics of balancing patterns in the Asia Pacific this book makes a convincing contribution to the debate on the US China relationship Northeast Asian Regionalism Christopher M. Dent,David W. F. Huang,2002-03-28 Examines both actual and potential developments in North East Asian regionalism from various levels and fields of analysis considering cooperative and integrative structures and processes Particular reference is made to the contemporary experience of Europe which provides important models of cooperation and integration in both the government and Korea's Changing Roles in Southeast Asia David I Steinberg,2010 The Republic of Korea's global expansion has been mirrored by its interest and presence in Southeast Asia From trade investment aid tourism to the cultural Korean wave its various roles have blossomed and its influence has grown The ASEAN region has not only affected Korean foreign policy but also many aspects of Korean life from the migration of Southeast Asian industrial workers to marriages and the curricula of academic institutions This volume explores various aspects of these new relationships and their importance to all concerned parties It brings together a group of specialists who have documented the growing interlocking roles between Korea and ASEAN and its constituent states in detail These developments have profound implications for relations in the East and Southeast Asian regions and for the world as a whole Towards a Northeast Asian Security Community Bernhard Seliger,Werner Pascha,2011-06-25 The Northeast Asian security environment is closely linked to Korea's growth perspectives for the future The spectacular rise of the South Korean economy in the past half century also known as Miracle on the Han River has been duly highlighted as one of the most successful cases of economic development worldwide However among the factors curbing South Korea's growth perspectives has been from the very beginning of its rise the coexistence of the difficult neighbour to the North Democratic People's Republic of Korea. While in the cold war this coexistence has been taken as inevitable after the end of the cold war there were hopes to overcome this obstacle to further growth either through collapse or enhanced cooperation with the North neither of which became reality. North Korea's unprecedented aggressiveness and development of long range ballistic missiles and nuclear devices made this threat truly an international question with multilateral talks coming into existence as ad hoc measures to cope with the nuclear crisis. It was then that the idea of a Northeast Asian Security Community was born. The contributions in this book discuss how a peaceful solution of the security problems could not only enhance stability of Korea's economy and reduce the defense burden considerably the so called peace dividend but would facilitate regional investments safer and regional solutions for common economic problems. When discussing the possibilities of a security framework or in an institutionalized form security community in Northeast Asia the authors in this volume are realistic as to not fall into the trap of wishful thinking which so often has characterized approaches to North Korea resulting in disappointment. The past two years again saw the rising of tensions in Northeast Asia and the masterful way in which even an impoverished and isolated country can play its cards. While it seems a new ice age between the two Koreas is possible nevertheless and maybe even more than ever the search for a stable security framework for Northeast Asia as a precondition for peaceful economic cooperation and development will go on. The chapters in this volume contribute to the ongoing debate to secure peace and development in Northeast Asia making this book of interest to both academics and policy makers alike.

Power and Security in Northeast Asia Pyŏng-guk Kim, Anthony Jones, 2007. As China's influence rises and the US attempts to retain its primacy in Northeast Asia the countries of the region are reconsidering their own security needs and availing themselves of new opportunities. Power and Security in Northeast Asia explores the complexities of current security strategies in the region revealing motivations and policies not often considered by traditional international relations analyses.

Ballistic Missile Defense and Northeast Asian Security Evan S. Medeiros, 2001. Recent US plans to deploy national missile defense NMD and theater missile defense TMD have emerged as significant issues for stability in Northeast Asia a region that faces a number of critical uncertainties and daunting security challenges in the coming decade. These uncertainties and challenges include questions about the future US military role in the region historical distrust between major powers the continued existence of divided states ongoing military modernization programs territorial disputes resource conflicts the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles and continuing shifts in relative economic and military power. US interest in deploying NMD and TMD is partly a response to military developments in Northeast Asia including China's missile buildup across the Taiwan Strait and North Korea's efforts to develop nuclear weapons and long range ballistic missiles. Yet the US debate about missile defense has largely focused on NMD and the Anti Ballistic Missile ABM Treaty. This originally steered the debate toward Russia and away from China and Japan. The US national security community has tended to emphasize the military requirements and effectiveness of NMD and TMD without fully examining the regional security implications. As a result, these implications have not been fully explored and debated either within US policymaking circles or with their counterpart communities in China and Japan. Broader US interests in the region, maintenance of US alliances and nonproliferation goals, have not been systematically connected to missile defense issues. To address these shortcomings, the Stanley Foundation in conjunction with the National Defense University and the Monterey Institute of International Studies Center for Nonproliferation Studies organized a series of three conferences to conduct a thorough examination of the regional security implications of US NMD and TMD plans. This conference series, titled Ballistic Missile Defense in Northeast Asia: Implications for Security Relations Among the Regional Powers, engaged a wide variety of experts from the United States, China, and Japan to gain insights into the potential political and military implications of specific US deployment modes. A report of the conference series was prepared by Evan S. Medeiros of the Monterey Institute and published by the Stanley Foundation. The following brief highlights the key conclusions of the report.

Alagappa, 2003. More than a decade has passed since the end of the Cold War, but Asia still faces serious security challenges. These include the current security environment in the Korean peninsula, across the Taiwan Strait, and over Kashmir; the danger of nuclear and missile proliferation; and the concern with the rising power of China and with American dominance. Indeed, some experts see Asia as a dangerous and unstable place. Alagappa disagrees, maintaining that Asia is a far more stable, predictable, and prosperous region than it was in the postindependence period. This volume also takes account of the changed security environment in Asia since September 11, 2001. Unlike many areas studies approaches, Alagappa's work makes a strong case for taking regional politics and security dynamics seriously from both theoretical and empirical approaches. The first part of this volume develops an analytical framework for the study of order; the salience of the different pathways to order is examined in the second part; the third investigates the management of specific security issues; and the final part discusses the nature of security order in Asia.
