personally relevant and interesting for targeted audiences Nevertheless despite these communicative qualities the analyses also show that participants interpretations are shaped by their preconceptions of climate change as a global and distant issue to be solved by other actors such as national governments or through international policy negotiations Although climate visualization can enhance a sense of proximity with climate change the localization of climate risk can also lead to participants downplaying the significance of climate impacts In addition despite the intentions of inducing a sense of agency in both cases of climate visualization participants critically negotiated messages concerning their roles as individuals in mitigating or adapting to climate change and assigned this responsibility onto other actors These findings show that although climate visualization presents certain communicative qualities it is not a panacea for engaging lay audiences with climate change This also underlines the importance of considering cultural and social aspects of the communicative event when studying and developing climate visualization tools as a means of communication
