Children and Television Norma Pecora, John P. Murray, Ellen Ann Wartella, 2009-03-04 This seminal volume is a comprehensive review of the literature on children's television covering fifty years of academic research on children and television. The work includes studies of content effects and policy and offers research conducted by social scientists and cultural studies scholars. The research questions represented here consider the content of programming, children's responses to television, regulation concerning children's television, policies, issues of advertising and concerns about sex and race stereotyping, often voicing concerns that children's entertainment be held to a higher standard. The volume also offers essays by scholars who have been seeking answers to some of the most critical questions addressed by this research. It represents the interdisciplinary nature of research on children and television and draws on many academic traditions including communication studies, psychology, sociology, education, economics and medicine. The full bibliography is included on CD. Arguably the most comprehensive bibliography of research on children and television, this work illustrates the ongoing evolution of scholarship in this area and establishes how it informs or changes public policy as well as defining its role in shaping a future agenda. The volume will be a required resource for scholars, researchers and policy makers concerned with issues of children and television, media policy, media literacy and education and family studies. Horror Films James B.

Weaver, Ron Tamborini, 2013-11-05 Why do so many of us enjoy being told frightening stories? What are some of the consequences that result from such exposure? In light of the considerable popularity of horror films over the last three decades, these questions have become the focus of growing attention for many scholars. However, research on audience preferences for and reactions to horror films has been performed eclectically by investigators from varied theoretical and methodological backgrounds. As a result, the information has not been effectively integrated. This volume was written to address this problem and to position the study of audience responses to frightening fiction as a significant research topic.
