

Television And Children

Michael J. A. Howe

Television And Children:

Television and Children Aimee Dorr, 1986-04 Aimee Dorr examines children's interaction with television emphasizing the child's active role in making sense of television. She discusses specific examples of programmes watched by children, the sense they make of advertising and programming, what children know about the medium, what a formal feature is, what effects television can have, how effects are studied, and what literacy curricula look like. The Children's Television Community

J. Alison Bryant, 2014-04-08 This volume presents an analysis of the children's television community, the organizations, major players, and approaches to programming, and offers an overview of the history, current state, and future of children's TV. The Children's Television Community is highly informative for educators, industry professionals, and practitioners in media, developmental psychology, and education. Children and Television Norma Pecora, John P. Murray, Ellen Ann Wartella, 2009-03-04 This seminal volume is a comprehensive review of the literature on children's television covering fifty years of academic research on children and television. The work includes studies of content, effects, and policy, and offers research conducted by social scientists and cultural studies scholars. The research questions represented here consider the content of programming, children's responses to television, regulation concerning children's television, policies, issues of advertising, and concerns about sex and race stereotyping, often voicing concerns that children's entertainment be held to a higher standard. The volume also offers essays by scholars who have been seeking answers to some of the most critical questions addressed by this research. It represents the interdisciplinary nature of research on children and television and draws on many academic traditions including communication studies, psychology, sociology, education, economics, and medicine. The full bibliography is included on CD. Arguably the most comprehensive bibliography of research on children and television, this work illustrates the ongoing evolution of scholarship in this area and establishes how it informs or changes public policy, as well as defining its role in shaping a future agenda. The volume will be a required resource for scholars, researchers, and policy makers concerned with issues of children and television, media policy, media literacy, and education, and family studies. Television and Children Michael J. A. Howe, 1977 A psychologist explores the effects of violent and aggressive acts shown on television on children's behavior and attitudes towards violence.

Television Evelyn Kaye, Action for Children's Television, American Academy of Pediatrics, 1979 Television Josette

Frank, 1959 Television and the American Family J. Alison Bryant, 2001-01-01 This second edition of a trend-setting volume provides an updated examination of the interaction between families and the most pervasive mass medium, television. Charting the dynamic developments of the American family and television over the past decade, this volume provides a comprehensive representation of programmatic research into family and television and examines extensively the uses families make of television, how extensions of television affect usage, families' evolving attitudes toward television, the ways families have been and are portrayed on television, the effects television has on families, and the ways in which families can mediate its impact on their lives The volume is an invaluable resource for scholars and students in the areas of media and society children and media and family studies The Early Window: Effects of Television on Children and Youth Robert M.
