

“Tell Ye Your Children...”

The Twisted Swedish Road to Holocaust Recognition

KLAS-GÖRAN KARLSSON

ABSTRACT: From a historical perspective, this article analyzes the dramatic political process in the 1990s when modern Sweden left its traditional dissociation from historical orientations by entering into a European context in which the Second World War and the Holocaust were crucial historical landmarks. The political campaign Living History must be understood in terms of recent processes of both nationalization and Europeanization of history. As a conclusion, three problems of the politics of history are discussed: a competing European historical focus on communist crimes against humanity, a simplistic and reductionist political use of Holocaust history, and a difficult but necessary discussion of the potential lessons of history in general, and of Holocaust history in particular.

RÉSUMÉ : D'un point de vue historique, cet article analyse le processus politique dramatique des années 1990, par lequel la Suède moderne a laissé derrière elle la dissociation traditionnelle de ses orientations historiques en entrant dans un contexte européen dans lequel la Seconde Guerre mondiale et l'Holocauste étaient des points de repère historiques cruciaux. La campagne politique de l'Histoire vivante [Living History] doit être comprise en termes de processus récents tant de nationalisation que d'eupéanisation de l'histoire. Trois problèmes de la politique historique sont discutés en conclusion : un accent historique européen concurrent vis-à-vis des crimes contre l'humanité communistes; une utilisation politique simpliste et réductionniste de l'histoire de l'Holocauste; et une discussion difficile, mais nécessaire des enseignements potentiels de l'histoire en général, et de l'histoire de l'Holocauste en particulier.
