The Life of Our Life: The Preaching of the Beatitudes Henry James Coleridge, 1875 Pietism and the Foundations of the Modern World Justin A. Davis, 2019-08-09 The experiential impulse of Protestant Christianity often identified as Pietism is one of the key driving forces in shaping the western world as well as promoting the ethos of individualism and antipathy toward the larger society As such understanding the foundations of Pietism is an essential and overlooked aspect of Western Christianity This work helps to address this gap in scholarship by addressing the first two centuries of Pietism First this work shows where the experiential impulse is found within medieval Christianity specifically in mysticism Following the Protestant Reformation this experiential impulse is unmoored from church tradition but still finds confessional variants including Lutheran Reform and Anglican The work then focuses on six key figures in the development of Pietism specifically William Perkins Johann Arndt Philip Spener August Francke Count Zinzendorf and John Wesley demonstrating that Pietism begins as a protest against institutional forms but then grows into institutional and denominational forms itself These institutional forms include Moravians Methodists and Prussianism which directly shaped Germany England and America though the latter not until the nineteenth century This work reveals the diverse impact Pietism had while remaining a cohesive yet contradictory movement

Tradition and the Modern World B. A. Gerrish, 2007-04-01 Together with the sixteenth century the nineteenth century is universally recognized as one of the two most creative periods in Protestant thought It is also widely regarded as a period that marked a break with the heritage of the Reformation In five elegantly written essays B A Gerrish challenges this assumption by showing that some of the foremost leaders of nineteenth century liberal Protestantism found loyalty to their tradition compatible with change and desired a development rather than either rejection or repetition of traditional doctrines Gerrish considers five basic theological issues and shows how each is developed in the thinking of a nineteenth century theologian of the Reformed tradition The formal question of continuity and change in theological reflection is viewed through the work of Schleiermacher Four other Reformed leaders are then studied to exemplify the material transformation of particular doctrines Nevin the church John McLeod Campbell the atonement Alexander Schweizer providence and predestination and Biedermann life eternal Gerrish permits each of the five theologians to speak for himself about what he was doing and how it constituted a continuation of old doctrines In so doing Gerrish invites the provocative question whether there was not something characteristically Protestant about their thinking precisely because they understood continuity as a kind of change The essays offer a reassessment of nineteenth century theological history fresh interpretations of some classical answers to enduring theological questions and a contribution to the wider problem of tradition in the modern world The Mosaic Law in Modern Life Cleland Boyd McAfee,1906 The Message of Jesus to Our Modern Life Shailer Mathews,1915 NKJV, The Modern Life Study Bible Thomas Nelson,2014-01-28
