

Hauler News

Greetings,

Things seem to be moving right along. Regardless of almost weekly sputters, the economy is still moving forward, although very slowly. There are always interesting things going on in the transportation industry. In this issue, we feature everything from humans being stored in bus luggage compartments to fuel card management tips, which are designed to help stem the tide of fuel card fraud. Finally, we touch on the driver shortage which is being felt more and more as the economy improves. There are less drivers to fill the orders and move the goods that we depend on to keep our economy running smoothly.

Regards,

THEY GOT SOMETHING RIGHT...GO DOT!

I apologize that I have agonized in blog after blog, post after post preaching on the evils of regulation and the agony of overenvironmentalism (don't look for the word in the dictionary, I just made it up). But all has changed now for truckers, bus drivers, auto manufacturers and carhousers. The Department of Transportation has used their regulatory power for something I agree with.

Haines Tours is a bus company that was transporting passengers in the luggage bins which sounds pretty horrific. I guess it's a step up from hitchhiking minus the air conditioning. Of course you could be locked in the dark aluminum crawlspace with someone just as bad as Ted Bundy with nothing but a flashlight and some high density luggage to protect you since no one can hear your scream in there anyway. Worse, what if someone expires in the steamy lightless air of the luggage cabin and plying passengers are inconvenienced by the smell. You know some strongly worded letters are going out to the executives of Haines Tours after that trip is over.

Regardless, Haines Motor Company needs to be off the road for this heinous and dangerous safety violation. First of all, this was not a bus ride from Tijuana to Cali. This was a short hop from Michigan to Ohio which leaves me pondering a few questions. If the passengers were so desperate that they had to ride cargo, don't you think the driver could have at least let them stand in the aisle of the bus with the other humans. As a patriotic American, I am willing to allow you to stand and breathe the same air conditioned oxygen as me in the passenger section of the bus. I do grimace for a few seconds at the thought of some indigent stranger suffocating and dehydrating in the bowels of the vehicle right beneath my feet (Really, under the floor boards). In fact, it's hard to nap knowing your three inches from my shoelaces dying, so please come up to the passenger section.

I could go on and on because the amusement factor of these "decay of western society" type stories is great but the attention needs to go back to the Department of Transportation. Good job on getting companies like this off the road. It didn't take billions of dollars of mind boggling surveillance technology. NO officers were at risk to "ting" the greedy bus company and catch them in the cargo passenger seat trade. No embarrassing messy Federal court battles were needed. Just good old fashioned common sense made a difference in the lives of people. I am all for this kind of government use of power. Blatant, dangerous violations of the law and human safety are definitely what I want my tax dollars to fight against.

FUEL CARD FRAUD PREVENTION TIPS

I recently read about the impact that fuel card fraud is having on trucking companies alike. As the price of fuel goes up, the temptation to cheat at the pump by selling off extra fuel charged to a company fuel card increases. I saw a number of tips in the June/July issue of Transport Topics.

- 1. This one is a no brainer. If you don't have strict policies about fuel cards...start them!
- 2. Put a lower gallon fill up limit in place.
- 3. Require a call in or phone verification by the driver to the fleet manager or dispatcher before each fill up.
- 4. Only allow fuel cards to activate once a driver has checked in on his or her shift.

The Best of Dot Com Humor Michael L. Turnbull, 2000-12-20 The Best of Dot Com Humor grew out of an increasing dependence on the Internet by my business As we became more involved in communicating transferring information and redefining customer relationships with the use of the Internet so too did we spend more time in frivolous communication with business associates and friends on the Internet Soon we were communicating with friends of friends and associates The exponential growth through the Internet led to a field of entertainment and humor that was almost boundless In addition to receiving and sending stories audio clips video clips cartoons jokes etc I began to keep the very best of the litter in a file Eventually my friends and the material in the file begged for publication Once the decision to publish was made my first trip was via the Internet to Amazon com and my second endeavor was a visit to the closest Barnes and Noble Both stops told me a great deal about what I did not want in my book Along parade of stories was not my only goal I wanted the reader to think about how the Internet has changed humor and how the reader might use humor in every day life to improve communication skills and effectiveness I also wished to save the reader one hell of a lot of time by listing some of the really humorous sites on the Internet Unfortunately really good humor is as rare as rocking horse manure to find anywhere especially the Internet The above notwithstanding my main reason in writing and editing this book is to make you laugh out loud Taking a brief look at humor and how the Internet may have altered its face finishes a distant second to my desire to amuse you Explaining how you may use humor to advantage in your life will be of interest but again the meat of this coconut lies in the stories and Internet sites that can be used and revisited many times over E B White said Humor can be dissected as can a frog but both die Please consider my review of Internet humor and the secrets of using humor in life as back round information that will allow you to enjoy more fully the stories and websites shared here If you truly enjoy this book and would like to have a CD ROM to download into your computer please contact me at mltpg purchasedparts com fax me at 313 882 9198 or write me at 48 DePetrus Way Grosse Pointe MI 48236 For 9 99 I will send you a CD ROM that includes not only the entire content of The Best of Dot Com Humor but also video and audio clips collected at the same time the book was compiled Thank you for your interest in The Best of Dot Com Humor Michael L Turnbull
