Virmani, E. A. Siddiq, K. Muralidharan, 1998 Hybrid Rice - The Journey Robin Andrews, 2017-03-17 In 1964 a Chinese rice breeder Yuan Longping discovered a rice plant that was the genetic key to the successful development of high yielding hybrid rice At that time China was a secretive communist state where self pollinating varietal rice was grown on collective farms using highly labor intensive practices Forty years later by 2004 hybrid rice based on Yuan's work was being grown commercially in the United States using mechanized farming practices This book describes the journey across those four decades and the chain of events and people which resulted in technical success in China by 1976 and in the United States by 2000 Extraordinary political and technological developments occurred during this time and the book describes these and the many serendipitous events and people of different backgrounds that were involved in the successful journey It is estimated that hybrid rice is now 2017 saving the US rice industry as much as 100 million each year Hybrid Rice Seed Production Technology and Its Impact on Seed Industries and Rural Employment Opportunities in Asia S.S. Virmani, 2002 The successful commercialization of hybrid rice in many parts of the world is linked to the development of hybrid seed production technology Although rice is a self pollinated crop a hybrid seed production mechanism has been developed using systems based on cytoplasmic and environmentally sensitive genetic male sterility Chinese seed growers obtain on average 2.5 mt/ha seed yields range 1.5 to 7.4 mt/ha Outside China in tropical countries mean seed yields are about 1.2 mt/ha range 0.5 to 4.0 mt/ha Hybrid seed production technology is economically viable in China and other countries with abundant and cheap labor because it requires about 50 mandays/ha more labor than normal rice cultivation Studies on Seed Production and Storage Technology in Hybrid Rice C. L. Maurya, 2014-07-22 The Asian cultivated rice Oryza sativa L is an economically important crop that is the staple food for more than one half of the world's population Rice contains a large amount of starch some protein fat minerals and vitamins It provides more calories per hectare than any
