Social And Community Forestry:

Principles and Practices of Social-cum-community Forestry V. N. Prasad,1985 Farm and Community Forestry Gerald Foley,Geoffrey Barnard,2024-06-25 In 1984 when this book was originally published the need to take forestry outside the forests and involve local people in tree growing was widely recognised Projects to encourage farm and community forestry were launched in over 50 developing countries This book describes the main approaches which were taken discussing their scope and limitation It examines the reasons why people plant trees and the constraints which prevent them from doing so It analyses supply and demand systems for wood and the underlying forces causing tree depletion Key aspects of programme design and implementation are also covered including technical problems the role of extension services and programme planning requirements Growing from Seed Celeste Lacuna-Richman,2011-10-05 Social Forestry and its most well known variant Community Forestry have been practiced almost as long as people have used forests During this time forests have provided people with countless goods and services including wood medicine food clean water and recreation In making use of forest resources people throughout history have frequently organized themselves and established both formal and informal rules However just as the discipline of Forestry had previously limited and concentrated the function of forests to the timber it provides the popular understanding of Social Forestry has restricted it to a Forestry sub topic that deals with welfare without any connection to income generation and is practiced only in developing countries This volume introduces the concepts of Social Forestry to the student gives examples of its practice around the world and attempts to anticipate developments in its future It aims to widen the concept of Social Forestry from a sub practice within Forestry to a practice that will make Forestry relevant in countries where wood production alone is no longer the main reason for keeping land forested thereby rediscovering and redefining this important topic Community Forestry in the United States Mark Baker,Jonathan Kusel,2013-04-16 Across the United States people are developing new relationships with the forest ecosystems on which they depend with a common goal of improving the health of the land and the well being of their communities Practitioners and supporters of what has come to be called community forestry are challenging current approaches to forest management as they seek to end the historical disfranchisement of communities and workers from forest management and the all too pervasive trends of long term disinvestment in ecosystems and human communities that have undermined the health of both Community Forestry in the United States is an analytically rigorous and historically informed assessment of this new movement It examines the current state of community forestry through a grounded assessment of where it stands now and where it might go in the future The book not only clarifies the state of the movement but also suggests a trajectory and process for its continued development Social Learning in Community Forests Eva Wollenberg,2001-01-01 Social Forestry K. F. Wiersum,1999 Forestry science became more empirically oriented by paying attention to all possible forest management conditions rather than to professionally controlled forest management situations

only These changes in forestry science can best be considered as an evolutionary change rather than a paradigmatic one However the differentiation in tasks of professional foresters and the loosening of the close institutional links between forestry scientists and professional practitioners can be considered as involving a paradigmatic change in forestry as professional institution Creating Community-forestry Partnerships ,1995 Turning Over New Leaves Robert C. Salazar,2001 The Economic Theory of Community Forestry David Robinson,2016-05-26 Community forestry is an expanding model of forest management around the world Over a quarter of forests in developing countries are now owned by or assigned to communities and there is a growing community forestry movement in developed countries such as Canada and the USA There is however no economic theory of community forestry and no systematic treatment of the potential economic advantages of promoting Community forestry in developed countries As a result much of the policy debate over forest management and forest tenure rests on confused and often erroneous views held by policy makers and encouraged by the dominant forestry industry The Economic Theory of Community Forestry aims to address this gap and provides the tools for understanding community forestry movement as an alternative form of ownership that can mobilize community resources and encourage innovation It uses a wide range of economic principles to show how community forestry can be economically superior to conventional forestry provides examples from Canadian practice and discusses the regulatory regime that policy makers must put in place to benefit from community forestry This book will be of interest to policy makers activists community forestry managers and members foresters and forestry students Projects with People Peter Oakley,1991 People s participation has begun to influence the practice of development substantially This study provides an interpretation of how participation occurs uses case studies to highlight various approaches and develops elements of a strategy and a methodology Interests and Power as Drivers of Community Forestry Rosan Raj Devkota,2010 Community Organizations and Government Bureaucracies in Social Forestry Jefferson Fox,R. J. Fisher,1990 Mexico's Community Forest Enterprises David Barton Bray,2020-11-24 The road to sustainable forest management and stewardship has been debated for decades Some advocate for governmental control and oversight Some say that the only way to stem the tide of deforestation is to place as many tracts as possible under strict protection Caught in the middle of this debate forest inhabitants of the developing world struggle to balance the extraction of precarious livelihoods from forests while responding to increasing pressures from national governments international institutions and their own perceptions of environmental decline to protect biodiversity restore forests and mitigate climate change Mexico presents a unique case in which much of the nation s forests were placed as commons in the hands of communities who with state support and their own entrepreneurial vigor created community forest enterprises CFEs David Barton Bray who has spent more than thirty years engaged with and researching Mexican community forestry shows that this reform has transformed forest management in that country at a scale and level of maturity unmatched anywhere else in the world For decades Mexico has been conducting a de facto large scale experiment in the design of a national social ecological system SES focused on community forests What happens when you give subsistence communities rights over forests as well as training organizational support equipment and financial capital Do the communities destroy the forest in the name of economic development or do they manage them sustainably generating current income while maintaining intergenerational value as a resource for their children Bray shares the scientific and social evidence that can now begin to answer these questions This is an invaluable resource for students researchers and the interested public on the future of global forest resilience and the possibilities for a good Anthropocene
