T. Evans, Keith

Frankish,2009 This book explores the idea that we have two minds one that is automatic unconscious and fast the other controlled conscious and slow In recent years there has been great interest in so called dual process theories of reasoning and rationality According to dual process theories there are two distinct systems underlying human reasoning an evolutionarily old system that is associative automatic unconscious parallel and fast and a more recent distinctively human system that is rule based controlled conscious serial and slow Within the former processes are held to be innate and to use heuristics which evolved to solve specific adaptive problems In the latter processes are taken to be learned flexible and responsive to rational norms Despite the attention these theories are attracting there is still poor communication between dual process theorists themselves and the substantial bodies of work on dual processes in cognitive psychology and social psychology remain isolated from each other This book brings together leading researchers on dual processes to summarize the state of the art highlight key issues present different perspectives explore implications and provide a stimulus to further work It includes new ideas about the human mind both by contemporary philosophers interested in broad theoretical questions about mental architecture and by psychologists specialising in traditionally distinct and isolated fields For all those in the cognitive sciences this is a book that will advance dual process theorizing promote interdisciplinary communication and encourage further applications of dual process approaches

The Epistemological Spectrum David K. Henderson, Terence Horgan, 2011-08-04

David Henderson and Terence Horgan set out a broad new approach to epistemology which they see as a mixed discipline having both a priori and empirical elements They defend the roles of a priori reflection and conceptual analysis in philosophy but their revisionary account of these philosophical methods allows them a subtle but essential empirical dimension They espouse a dual perspective position which they call iceberg epistemology respecting the important differences between epistemic processes that are consciously accessible and those that are not Reflecting on epistemic justification they introduce the notion of transglobal reliability as the mark of the cognitive processes that are suitable for humans Which cognitive processes these are depends on contingent facts about human cognitive capacities and these cannot be known a priori

The book then provides a systematic and critical examination of the contributions of behavioral studies to all major fields of law including property, contracts, consumer protection, torts, corporate securities, regulation, antitrust, administrative, constitutional, international, criminal, and evidence law, as well as to the behavior of key players in the legal arena: litigants and judicial decision makers.
