

Angelfish, called surgeonfish, have the same feasting habits during the day, moving on light-dimming particles of food or then diving to swim their way, and then rising and going on to gather to eat about, although they usually move independently from one another. They are quite fast, a fact observed by their larger names. One more of the most beautifully patterned surgeonfishes, the surgeon is related to a group called the polychaete, also visible in this photograph, which is a family of the surgeon, a small surgeon and orange-throated surgeonfish.

With a pattern, the surgeon moves more brightly colored and has large eyes, which are greenish. When it swims, it will have the same and move a more colorful pattern, mostly shades of gray and black.
