respectively. In general, most AI MPPF techniques are efficient in handling PFC and tracking the GP efficiently and accurately at all times but a small difference occurs between them in some evaluation parameters such as convergence speed, complexity, hardware implementation and initialization parameters distribution and makes the difference in their final evaluation as shown in Fig. 10. Both PFC and ANN have the same total evaluation points but, optimization and improvements that have been done on PFC may put it in high arrangement with PPA and PA.

On the other hand, the most effective and efficient soft computing MPPF techniques based AI with PFC are DR, ANNs followed by CR but they may not provide convergence to the GP in some cases of PFC (Rahman and Shamsuddin, 2017). Although, both DR and ANNs have the same total evaluation points but, the improvements that have been done on DR may put it in high ranking with MPPF techniques based AI. Both PFC and ANN are not able to track the GP separately and fail to handle the PFC since training ANN needs data which is not available from the random nature of PFC. In addition, the membership function and control variables of PFC are static more defined, while PFC is dynamic and tracking the varying GP is not a direct task (Rahman et al., 2017). Also, they require high computation controller ability for training in addition to extensive information required about the PV system for training and tracking roles (Rahman and Shamsuddin, 2017). Therefore, they should be optimized and combined with other MPPF techniques to improve their performance and convergence to the GP with PFC. Finally, although conventional MPPF techniques cannot be applied with PFC, they are efficient in tracking the unique MPPF under random conditions. Both IC and PFC have good performance with the same total evaluation points followed by IC and CR techniques. This conclusion matches with the finding that some modifications and improvements on PFC put it in the same performance level with IC.

6. Conclusions

This paper introduced a comparative and comprehensive review for the IT most famous MPPF techniques to track the GP instead of LPs and alleviate the PFC effects. The IT MPPF techniques are divided into three groups which are conventional, soft computing (SC, SI) and hybrid based MPPF techniques. One of the most significant findings introduced in this study is the technical and economical assessment for the IT most famous and efficient MPPF techniques based on IT evaluation parameters. In addition, a novel evaluation index has been introduced to rank these IT techniques based on the 9 most important key issues with total evaluation by 90 points for these MPPF techniques. Ranking of these IT MPPF techniques will help researchers, scientists, and industrial sector to pick up the most effective and appropriate MPPF techniques easily. Based on these evaluations, both IC and PFC have the same total evaluation points followed by IC and CR techniques. This conclusion matches with the previous literature finding revealed that optimized PFC can have nearly the same efficiency as IC. Also, conventional MPPF techniques are not applicable with PS where they can track the unique peak efficiently and accurately but, they fail to track the GP and stuck at the first MPPF whenever it is GP or LP. Whereas, MPPF techniques based AI are efficient and accurate to track the unique peak under random condition compared to conventional techniques and mitigate their shortcomings related to tracking speed and oscillations around MPPF at steady state. The most effective and efficient AI based MPPF techniques with PFC are DR, ANNs followed by CR. Although, both DR and ANNs have the same total evaluation points but, optimization and improvements that have been done in recent years on DR may put it in high ranking with MPPF techniques based AI. Both PFC and ANN are not able to track the GP separately and fail to handle the PFC. Therefore, it should be optimized and combined with
