

A large, dark-colored Sunderland flying boat is shown in flight, banking slightly to the right. The aircraft has a high-wing configuration and a large, rounded fuselage. Below the aircraft, the ocean is visible with several smaller ships, likely naval vessels, scattered across the water. The sky is a mix of light and dark clouds, suggesting a dramatic or historical setting.

Sunderland At War:

Sunderland at War 1939-45 Craig Armstrong,2020-08-31 Sunderland was a key shipbuilding and repair facility with a long history of providing vessels for the British Merchant Navy As well as its shipbuilding industry the town also possessed other important industries such as paint manufacturing and extensive industries connected with shipbuilding and coal mining The port town on the banks of the strategically important River Wear was also a main hub along with its northerly neighbor the River Tyne for coal exports with much of the coal produced in the huge Durham coalfield being dispatched south via the Wear All of this meant that the town found itself on the front lines of the war effort and marked it as a prime target for the Luftwaffe The town experienced several heavy air raids including one which caused a great deal of damage to both housing and key industries as well as resulting in serious casualties to the civilian population The considerable disruption and dislocation caused meant that the authorities struggled to provide adequate shelters and to fill the gaps within what were to become vital Air Raid Precautions services When the bombing came these volunteers were to make a vital contribution Sunderland also had a proud tradition of military service and many of her men and women volunteered for service in the armed forces with many paying the ultimate price in defense of freedom A large number of Sunderland men served in the Merchant Navy while the Royal Navy also boasted many Wearsiders The local Army regiment the famed Durham Light Infantry also boasted many Wearsiders and the regiment saw action in almost every theater of the war For other Wearsiders the attraction of flight drew them to service in the ranks of the RAF for some service in Bomber Command was motivated by a thirst for vengeance after witnessing the bombing of their home town

Ldr. Tom Dudley-Gordon,2015-11-06 THE beginnings of Coastal Command are obscure It is held by some that in embryo it consisted of five officers and four Bleriot monoplanes that were detached from Netheravon in August 1914 for coastal reconnaissance duties At this time however there was a flourishing

Naval Air Service which had its being up and down our coasts and which could properly be regarded as a coastal air force In 1918 the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service were amalgamated into the Royal Air Force By this time there were many aircraft of all sorts employed on coast watching convoy protection and the attack of submarines and very effectively they carried out their duties After the war this coastal organization was much reduced in size being composed of a few flying boat squadrons and one or two torpedo carrying units In addition the disembarked squadrons of the carrier borne air force were controlled and administered by what was then known as the Coastal Area When however under the menace of Hitlerism the expansion of the Royal Air Force took place Coastal Area by that time renamed Coastal Command took its share Working in close co operation with the Royal Navy the Command developed the activities which are so well described in this book Coastal Command has always been a rather independent part of the Royal Air Force Its operations have an element of mystery about them which is a trifle aggravating to the rest of the Service It has a jealous spirit of its own which makes its personnel when they are posted away hanker to come back and strive and contrive to that end unceasingly It is immensely proud of its job and of the way it does it In fact it has all the attributes of a first class team Long may it flourish as such
