Collective Morality and Crime in the Americas Christopher Birkbeck, 2012-12-07 This study examines the ways in which the moral community is talked into being in relation to crime and the objects of concern that typically occupy its attention It maps the imagined moral universe of the virtuous and the criminal and charts the relations between these two groups in the history of the present It examines the calls to action which symbolically endow the moral community with power And it looks at the character and content of collective moralizing The source materials are commentaries about crime and criminal justice appearing in selected newspapers across the Americas The moral talk found there is stylized routine trivial and occasionally dramatic It looks nothing like the weightier renderings of morality that derive from the reconstruction of a particular ethic or from the systematic probing of values and moral reasoning And its fuzzy offhand unexceptional and frequently unsystematic nature makes it a difficult candidate for explaining either stability or change in crime policies But moral talk has intrinsic importance as the creator and sustainer of an imagined moral community a community that symbolizes the existence and vigor of morality itself and confers a crucially important identity on its self proclaimed members And moral talk reveals inherent intersections between normative empirical and technical discourses highlighting the relationships between morality science and social engineering Thus a prosaic instrumental model of morality is particularly strong in North America but only found in a more abstract form in Latin America where it sits alongside a stirring vision of morality more directly anchored in virtue Research on social problems moral panics and the sociology of morality has largely overlooked the type of moral discourse studied here While emphasizing the culturally contingent nature of the findings the conclusion reflects on their significance for understanding the nature of moralizing the artifacts of talk and the construction of identity

How Claims Spread Joel Best, Best's anthology examines for the first time how diverse social issues road rage the metric system gun control and abortion are among those included migrate across national boundaries modifying themselves from place to place as a result of different claims claimsmakers and policy responses This unique collection assembled from new research by an international group of social problems scholars will fill a gap in undergraduate and graduate level studies in the constructionist analyses of social problems as well as in political science public policy and criminology Claims concerning one social problem often influence those about another claimsmakers borrow rhetoric and tactics from one another In some cases experienced claimsmakers join efforts to call attention to other social problems compelling images e.g. the threatened child or random violence link claims about different problems and reactions to one set of claims These case studies describe very different processes ranging from deliberate attempts to disseminate social problem claims to developments that were more inadvertent from successes in which social problem constructions spread to new countries to failures in which claims were sown but failed to take root They are intended to suggest that the diffusion of social problems is neither simple nor automatic Joel Best is professor and chair Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice University of Delaware He has served as an editorial advisor for Aldine that has produced fifty titles The Canadian Annual Review of Public Affairs ,1925 Social Problems Lorne Tepperman,James E.
