to imperial confessional and language policy for in Russian discourse at that time it was religion and language that were considered to be the most important criteria determining nationality The account of Russian nationalities policy presented here differs considerably from the assessments usually offered by historians from east central Europe primarily because the author provides a more subtle description of the aims of imperial nationalities policy rejecting the claim that the Russian authorities consistently sought to assimilate members of other national groups At the same time the interpretation this study offers opens a discussion with western and Russian historians especially those who lay heavy emphasis on discourse analysis This study asserts that the rhetoric of officials and certain public campaigners was influenced by a concept of political correctness which condemned all forms of ethnic denationalisation A closer look at the implementation of discriminatory policy allows us to discern within Russian imperial policy more attempts to assimilate or otherwise repress the cultures of non dominant national groups than it is possible to appreciate simply by analysing discourse alone

Modern Language Teaching, 1914      The Teaching of Russian Thomas F. Magner, 1962      Second Language Acquisition in Childhood B. McLaughlin, 2013-10-28 First published in 1987 Throughout human history learning a second language has been an important part of the educational process From ancient times to the present school children have had to struggle to learn a second language and in many cases third and fourth languages To be educated meant to know a language other than the language of one's family and community The contemporary American educational system is one of the few in recorded history that allows its products to remain monolingual

Language and Education in Multilingual Settings Bernard Spolsky, 1986 The difference between languages that children learn in the home their mother tongues and the languages valued by society and established as the medium of instruction in schools is an almost universal problem in educational systems Proposals for mother tongue education for bilingual programmes of various kinds or for more effective teaching of literary or standard languages all depend on an understanding of the underlying problem of language education in multilingual settings The writers of Language and Education in Multilingual Settings do not have a single view of the issues for they are international in background and experience and interdisciplinary in training and approach moreover as will be clear they differ in political and philosophical beliefs in scholarly rhetoric in research paradigms and in personal circumstances In this book researchers from India Yugoslavia the USSR the USA New Zealand Zambia Denmark Australia and Israel discuss practice and theory in various parts of the world
