

The illustration depicts a scene where a storyteller, an older man with a long white beard and a green hat, sits in a wooden chair. He is holding a book and gesturing with his right hand. Around him, several children are gathered on a yellow patch of ground. One boy on the left holds a long pole. A girl sits on the ground, and another child is lying down. A dog and a cat are also present. In the background, there is a green field with a tree and a spider hanging from a web. The title is written on a banner across the top.

Sound Rising from the Paper Paize Keulemans, 2020-05-11 Chinese martial arts novels from the late nineteenth century are filled with a host of suggestive sounds Characters cuss and curse in colorful dialect accents vendor calls ring out from bustling marketplaces and martial arts action scenes come to life with the loud clash of swords and the sounds of bodies colliding What is the purpose of these sounds and what is their history In Sound Rising from the Paper Paize Keulemans answers these questions by critically reexamining the relationship between martial arts novels published in the final decades of the nineteenth century and earlier storyteller manuscripts He finds that by incorporating imitating and sometimes inventing storyteller sounds these novels turned the text from a silent object into a lively simulacrum of festival atmosphere thereby transforming the solitary act of reading into the communal sharing of an oral performance By focusing on the role sound played in late nineteenth century martial arts fiction Keulemans offers alternatives to the visual models that have dominated our approach to the study of print culture the commercialization of textual production and the construction of the modern reading subject Sounds of Language Readers Bill Martin, 1966 Race Sounds Nicole Brittingham Furlonge, 2018-05-15 We live in a world of talk Yet Race Sounds argues that we need to listen more not just hear things but actively listen particularly in relation to how we engage race gender and class differences Forging new ideas about the relationship between race and sound Furlonge explores how black artists including well known figures such as writers Ralph Ellison and Zora Neale Hurston and singers Bettye LaVette and Aretha Franklin among others imagine listening Drawing from a multimedia archive Furlonge examines how many of the texts call on readers to listen in print In the process she gives us a new way to read and interpret these canonical aurally inflected texts and demonstrates how listening allows us to engage with the sonic lives of difference as readers thinkers and citizens Intervening in discourses of African American and black feminist literatures where sound and voice dominate Furlonge shifts our attention to listening as an aural strategy of cultural social and civic engagement that not only enlivens how we read write and critique texts but also informs how we might be more effective audiences for each other and against injustice in our midst The result is a fascinating examination that brings new insights to African American literature and art American literature democratic philosophy and sound studies
