Miller, 1998-02-12 Crime Control and Women reveals the current limitations of criminal justice policies that are oblivious to the impact they exert on citizens who vary by gender race and or social class Feminist in perspective the contributors to this volume share a common vision of hope that social change will result from social control and punishment that is just and human with commitments to prevention education and treatment The New Social Contract Joseph Dillon Davey, 1995-08-30 According to the Justice Department's National Crime Survey the crime rate in the United States is lower today than it was when Nixon was in the White House In spite of this political leaders demand nationwide prison construction as a response to the war on drugs and to accommodate the results of the new three strikes law At the same time the gap between rich and poor is wider than ever and the needs of the non disruptive poor are being ignored by the economic and political elites to the point of unprecedented homelessness The author predicts this widening gap will prompt the return of 1960s style civil turmoil which will lead to the end of the war on drugs and the emptying of hundreds of thousands of cells so the protesting poor can be plausibly threatened with incarceration National Corrections Reporting Program, Selective Incapacitation and Public Policy Kathleen Auerhahn, 2012-02-01 From the 1970s to the new millennium the prison population in the United States has quadrupled while an unprecedented amount of sentencing reform has taken place largely intended to protect the public from dangerous criminals This book details the California experience including the history and politics of criminal sentencing policy reform as well as the consequences of this activity to the criminal justice system Using cutting edge computer simulation modeling Kathleen Auerhahn explores the impact that sentencing reforms dating back to the 1970s have had on the composition and structure of the criminal justice system with specific focus on prison populations She illustrates how dynamic systems simulation modeling is used to both examine possible futures under a variety of sentencing structures and sentencing policy alternatives including narrowing strike zones and the early release of elderly offenders in order to more effectively target the dangerous criminals these policies promise to remove from society via incarceration National Judicial Reporting Program, 1990 Patrick A.
