Archaeological and anthropological investigations of depictions seldom extend beyond a single culture or a single geographical location although there is a powerful factor common to all depictions the factor of human perception In this volume an attempt is made to show how this factor affects both creation and recognition of depictions how in common with everyday vision of the environment typical contours are derived and used not merely to depict individually readily recognisable models but also how by concatenation they lead to such a splendid figure as Australian Kakadu crocodiles or by distortion to creation of illusions of pictorial depth such as is evoked by Leonardo da Vinci's perspective and by inverted Byzantine perspective thought by some to be an aberration Bartel's studies show that pictorial depth is often achieved to the artist's and many a viewer's but not to geometer's satisfaction by partial distortion and Chinese masterpieces embody side by side normal and inverted perspective The visual process is universally uniform if it were not one would not be able to recognise an Altamira bison as a bison and its foibles can be freely exploited Its best known exploiter is probably Cezanne His pictures are admired by many and puzzle many Strzemiński postulated that they compound distinct lines of sight thus endorsing primacy of central vision a concept thought by Gombrich to be of greater import to geometers than to artists

Arithmetic Advanced Kindergarten Henry Finch Rix, 1897 The Artist Explorers John Fairley, 2024-04-30 This is a visually stunning superb collection of artwork depicting British explorers and their journeys over the centuries It was in large part the lure of riches such as spices and gold and the promise of fertile land which tempted the British and other Europeans to venture out to unknown lands These intrepid explorers who devoted and often lost their lives on journeys of discovery were frequently accompanied by artists At the time there was no other way of pictorially recording their exploits and experiences James Cook and his botanist Joseph Banks had artists Alexander Buchan and Sydney Parkinson on board for their initial voyage to the South Seas Buchan s first pictures were of the natives of Tierra del Fuego as the Endeavour rounded Cape Horn but tragically within a month he died apparently of epilepsy Thomas Baines traveled with Livingstone while Charles Heaphy in New Zealand and the Governor s wife in India were amongst many others who produced drawings and paintings The many fine works in this book fashioned the British public s image of their countrymen s discoveries and later of the lives of those who remained in these faraway places Right up to the start of the 20th century their publication in the illustrated papers of the day became the core of popular appreciation
