Southern Women In The Recent Educational Movement In The South Library Of Southern Civilization:

Southern Women in the Recent Educational Movement in the South A. D. Mayo, 2001-03-01 Like many other northern clergymen after the Civil War A D Mayo became interested in the role that education could play in rebuilding southern society From 1880 to 1900 he traveled from Virginia to Texas as an educational missionary advocating the new education theories of the 1840s and 1850s In time he came to be considered one of the most perceptive observers of southern education during the period from the end of Reconstruction to the rise of the Redeemer governments in the 1890s Mayo was convinced that the changes in southern society that Reconstruction had failed to bring about could be realized under a sound educational system Learning he believed should be based on individual needs rather than on rote memorization of facts and teachers should be recruited from those trained in the civilizing values In Southern Women Mayo set forth at length the ideas that southern white women were the ideal ones to transmit learning to the young blacks Stressing the greatly expanding role of these women because of the war Mayo saw them as a kind of elite trained in the ideals and culture of the Old South but receptive to the values of the New South In their introduction Dan Carter and Amy Friedlander place Mayo in the context of nineteenth century intellectual and social currents and provide an interesting perspective on his often surprisingly contemporary sounding ideas on education Southern Women in the Recent Educational Movement in the South Amory D. Montgomery, 2018-12-05 Celeste Parrish and Educational Reform in the Progressive Era South follows a Civil War orphan's transformation from a Southside Virginia public school teacher to a nationally known progressive educator and feminist. In this vital intellectual biography, Rebecca S. Montgomery places feminism and gender at the center of her analysis and offers a new look at the postbellum movement for southern educational reform through the life of Celeste Parrish. Because Parrish's life coincided with critical years in the destruction and reconstruction of the southern social order, her biography provides unique opportunities to explore the links between southern nationalism, reactionary racism, and gender discrimination. Parrish's pursuit of higher education and a professional career pitted her against male opponents of coeducation who regarded female and black dependency as central to southern regional distinctiveness. When coupled with women's lack of formal political power, this resistance to gender equality discouraged progress and lowered the quality of public education throughout the South. The marginalization of women within the reform movement, headed by the Conference for Education in the South, further limited women's contributions to regional change. Although men welcomed female participation in grassroots organization, much of women's work was segregated in female networks and received less public acknowledgement than the reform work conducted by men. Despite receiving little credit for their accomplishments by working on the margins, women were able to use the southern movement and its philanthropic sponsors as alternate sources of influence and power. By exploring the consequences of gender discrimination for both educational reform and the influence of southern progressivism, Rebecca S. Montgomery contributes a nuanced understanding of how interlocking hierarchies of power structured opportunity and influenced the shape of reform in the U.S. South.

A Right to Read Patterson Toby Graham, 2002-04-11. A Right to Read is the first book to examine public library segregation from its origins in the late 19th century through its end during the tumultuous years of the 1960s civil rights movement. Graham focuses on Alabama, where African Americans denied access to white libraries worked to establish and maintain their own Negro branches. These libraries, separate but never equal, were always underfunded and inadequately prepared to meet the needs of their constituencies.
