Souvenir Of Venice:

Souvenirs of Venice Liana Bellon, 2016 This dissertation is the first study of the three hundred year history of souvenir images of Venice produced by local Venetians for tourists from the eighteenth century to the twenty first century The project traces the changes and the elements of continuity in the Venetian spaces depicted and in the visual conventions used The Introduction explains why Venice is a significant subject for a study of souvenir imagery and outlines the theoretical ideas related to travel and souvenirs that inform the work that follows Chapter One focuses on the view paintings of Venice by Giovanni Canaletto and Francesco Guardi as well as Antonio Visentini s engravings of Canaletto s paintings within the context of both the Grand Tour and Venice s dwindling power leading up to the fall of the Republic in 1797 Chapter Two explores nineteenth century photographs of Venice made by local photographers Carlo Ponti Carlo Naya and Tomaso Filippi with the photographs organized into central and peripheral spaces in the city and with attention devoted to archival material in the little known Archivio Filippi Chapter Three considers the photographs in their serial form as images included in commercial souvenir albums Chapter Four analyzes twentieth century postcards of Venice which used the nineteenth century photographs for their images The Conclusion includes a study of a company in Venice that is continuing the tradition of producing postcard views of the city for visitors The chapters also call attention to how the figures of locals and foreigners are presented in the images to the tourist circuits through Venice implied in collections of images bound together which are read here as visual guidebooks and to spaces that brought tourists together to engage with the city s souvenir images specifically Joseph Smith s viewing gallery on the Grand Canal in the eighteenth century photographers shops in San Marco in the nineteenth century and the post office at the Fondaco dei Tedeschi in the early twentieth century This thesis shows how Venetian souvenir images participated in reinforcing and shaping the spaces of tourism in the city as in for example the emergence of the Bridge of Sighs as a significant tourist site Furthermore these reproduced views influenced not only which sites tourists visited and how they enacted their roles as tourists but also how they anticipated and remembered their travels However tourists were not passive recipients Arguing for a dynamic relationship between the producers and consumers of the tourist imagery this thesis incorporates travel writing guidebooks and literature of the eighteenth nineteenth and twentieth centuries to highlight that tourists were aware that their perceptions of the city were shaped by the representations they had seen Moreover tourists had a hand in shaping the souvenir views presented to them In the eighteenth century Canaletto and Guardi s patrons suggested subject matter size and viewpoints for the view paintings In the nineteenth century photographers took into account the Gothic and Romantic sensibilities of visitors when photographing Venice and tourists were able to choose the images included in the commercial souvenir albums they purchased This collaboration between producer and consumer is seen most tangibly in postcards in which the tourist s own words accompany the commercial image This project is at the intersection of art historical work on material culture in which a close
