Soviet Dissident Artists:

Soviet Dissident Artists Matthew Baigell, Renee Baigell, 1995 If life was hard for all under the Soviet regime how much more difficult was it to be a dissident artist For those who did not belong to the dominant school of Socialist Realism it could be a life of great risk Often forced to scavenge for materials to use in paintings and sculptures these artists led both a sometimes dangerous illicit underground life as well as an acceptable public life In Soviet Dissident Artists Renee Baigell and Matthew Baigell interview nearly fifty former dissident artists to better understand their struggles under Soviet rule and their desires to maintain their sense of inner freedom In these probing interviews the artists chronicle their hardships and their friendships under the old Communist regime from the 1950s to the 1980s They relate their confrontations with the KGB and other government organizations sometimes with tragic consequences and how they managed to survive and create subversive work in their spare time Recording experiences largely unknown to Western artists these interviews describe one of the great heroic stories of the last half of the twentieth century

A Ransomed Dissident Igor Golomstock, 2018-10-25 In 1939 a ten year old Igor Golomstock accompanied his mother a medical doctor to the vast network of labour camps in the Russian Far East While she tended patients he was minded by assorted trusty prisoners hardened criminals and returned to Moscow an almost feral adolescent fluent in obscene prison jargon but intellectually ignorant Despite this dubious start he became a leading art historian and co author with his close friend Andrey Sinyavsky of the first deeply controversial monograph on Picasso published in the Soviet Union His writings on his 43 years in the Soviet Union offer a rare insight into life as a quietly subversive art historian and the post Stalin dissident community In vivid prose Golomstock shows the difficulties of publishing curating and talking about Western art in Soviet Russia and with self deprecating humour the absurd tragicomedy of life for the Moscow intelligentsia during Khrushchev's thaw and Brezhnev's stagnation He also offers a unique personal perspective on the 1966 trial of Sinyavsky and Yuri Daniel widely considered the end of Khrushchev's liberalism and the spark that ignited the Soviet dissident movement In 1972 he was given permission to leave the Soviet Union but only after paying a ransom of more than 25 years salary nominally intended to reimburse the state for his education A remarkable collection of artists scholars and intellectuals in Russia and the West including Roland Penrose came together to help him pay this astronomical sum His memoirs of life once in the UK offer an insider's view of the BBC Russian Service and a penetrating analysis of the notorious feud between Sinyavsky and Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn Nominated for the Russian Booker Prize on its publication in Russian in 2014 The Ransomed Dissident opens a window onto the life of a remarkable man a dissident of uncompromising moral integrity and with an outstanding gift for friendship

Komar, Melamid: Two Soviet Dissident Artists Jack Burnham, 1979 Komar/Melamid, Two Soviet Dissident Artists Vitaly Komar, Aleksandr Melamid, 1979 For the uninitiated the Komar Melamid paintings their work is a collaborative effort no doubt will be a surprise and a delight it is at once sprightly intricate and mystical Called Sots art for Socialist art it is a kind of Pop that parodies the propaganda posters and street banners designed for public consumption by Russian officialdom. The subjects from the first show include the stern head of a worker holding his finger to his lips and entitled Don't Babble. Several banners with such slogans as Glory to Labor and Our Goal Communism and a painting of a Laika cigarette pack using as its emblem the Soviet dog sent into orbit with Sputnik II in 1957. Soviet Critical Design Tom Cubbin, 2018-12-13 Soviet Critical Design is the first book to explore the socialist design practice of artistic projecteering which was developed by the USSR's Senezh Experimental Studio in the 1960s. Tom Cubbin examines the studio as a site for the development of the design discipline in the optimistic environment of the 1960s Soviet Thaw. He also explores how designers adapted to the fast-changing Soviet Union of the 1970s and 1980s considering their approach to critical projects highlighting the Soviet state's treatment of citizens' urban heritage and public spaces. Drawing on previously unpublished visual material from private archives and also extensive interviews, this book presents a new history of the late socialist period in the USSR which gives insight into the creative strategies of designers who engaged their practice as a contribution to broader discussions on alternative models for socialist existence. Cubbin shows how artistic projecteering must be read as a utopian activity which privileged the political and ideological over the functional. Soviet Art House Catriona Kelly, 2021 Its unique ability to sway the masses has led many observers to consider cinema the artform with the greatest political force. The images it produces can bolster leaders or contribute to their undoing. Soviet filmmakers often had to face great obstacles as they struggled to make art in an authoritarian society that put them not only under ideological pressure but also imposed rigid economic constraints on the industry. But while the Brezhnev era of Soviet filmmaking is often depicted as a period of great repression, Soviet Art House reveals that the films made at the prestigious Lenfilm studio in this period were far more imaginative than is usually suspected. In this pioneering study of a Soviet film studio, author Catriona Kelly delves into previously unpublished archival documents and interviews, memoirs and the films themselves to illuminate the ideological, economic and aesthetic dimensions of filmmaking in the Brezhnev era. She argues that especially the young filmmakers who joined the studio after its restructuring in 1961 revitalized its output and helped establish Leningrad as a leading center of oppositional art. This unique insight into Soviet film production shows not only the inner workings of Soviet institutions before the system collapsed but also traces how filmmakers tirelessly dodged and negotiated contradictory demands to create sophisticated and highly original movies. Making of the West, Volume II: Since 1500 Lynn Hunt, Thomas R. Martin, Barbara H. Rosenwein, Bonnie G. Smith, 2012-01-04 Students of Western civilization need more than facts. They need to understand the cross-cultural global exchanges that shaped Western history to be able to draw connections between the social, cultural, political, economic and intellectual happenings in a given era and to see the West not as a fixed region but a living, evolving construct. These needs have long been central to The Making of the West. The book's chronological narrative emphasizes the wide variety of peoples and cultures that created Western civilization and places them together in a common context enabling students to witness the unfolding of Western history understand change over time and recognize fundamental relationships redefinition of what is and is not American The Postmodern Challenge: Perspectives East and West ,2023-12-04 This volume is designed to bridge a gap in the current theoretical debate about the nature scope and relevance of postmodern perspectives in the humanist and social sciences in Eastern and Western Europe While the debate has been reasonably comprehensive and certainly abrasive in Western European and Anglophone countries it has signally failed to incorporate the viewpoints of Eastern European scholars and intellectuals Even the current appropriation of Mikhail Bakhtin as a prophet of the postmodern is paradoxically a monologic engagement with his thought rather than a dialogic encounter of cultures Doubtless different historical experiences ideology and social aspirations go some way to account for the weariness of Eastern Europe with postmodern challenge and its glad embrace by Western scholars The volume comprises some fifteen essays by leading historians literary theorists and social scientists from Western and Eastern Europe and America It has a threefold aim firstly to illuminate the distinctiveness of current Western and Eastern European theorizing about history and society secondly to reveal points of tension and disagreement and finally to open up a space for a meeting of seemingly incompatible worlds American Artists, Jewish Images Matthew Baigell,2006-03-16 Born over a fifty year period the artists in this volume represent several generations of twentieth century artists Examining the work of such influential artists as Mark Rothko Max Weber and Ruth Weisberg Baigell directly confronts their Jewish identity as a religious cultural and psychological component of their lives and explores the way in which this influence is reflected in their art Drawing upon their common heritage Baigell reveals the different ways these artists responded to the Great Immigration the Depression the Holocaust the founding of the state of Israel and the rise of feminism Each artist s varied Jewish experiences have contributed to the creation of a visual language and subject matter that reflect both Jewish assimilation and Jewish continuity in ways that inform modern Jewish history and changes in present day America Offering a fresh examination of well known artists as well as long overdue attention to lesser known artists Baigell s incisive observations are indispensable to our understanding of the Jewish themes in these artists work Written in a lively and spirited prose this book is compulsory reading for those interested in modern American art and Jewish studies Politics of Nationality and the Erosion of the USSR Zvi Y.
