by man The nature of the inquiry rendered it necessary to treat not only of all the chief breeds of domestic horses known in historical times but also to take a survey of all the other living Equidae as well as of the ancestors of the genus The question of coloration naturally holds a prominent place in the investigation and I have tried to trace historically the origin of the various colours found in domestic horses At the same time I have endeavoured to indicate though it must be confessed rather cursorily the influence exercised on the history of the chief nations of the ancient medieval and modern world by the possession of horses and especially by the acquisition of what I venture to term the Libyan horse I have also tried to point out the lessons of supreme importance to the breeder which can be learned from the contemplation of the injury wrought to breeds of great value by the ill judged and unscientific introduction of alien blood a practice in no small degree due to a lack of historical knowledge and to a general belief that all our domestic races of horses like those of tame pigeons have been obtained solely by artificial breeding from a single wild species I must add a few words respecting the method of writing zoological names and the transliteration of foreign words About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
