examining children's thinking and ways in which language influences thought. She argues that young children's use of concepts such as dog, man, or intelligence reflects their deep commitment to the presence of these categories, properties that extends beyond the observable information about objects. The presence of this commitment in children also means that they do not come into the world as passive recipients of data but rather have an organizational scheme that supports categories. This volume will be of interest to developmental cognitive and social psychologists as well as to scholars in cognitive science and philosophy.
