From Them to Us Mel Ainscow,Tony Booth,2005-06-23 Inclusive education has become a phrase with international currency shaping the content of conferences and national educational policies around the world But what does it mean Is it about including a special group of disabled learners or students seen to have special needs them or is it concerned with making educational institutions inclusive responsive to the diversity of all their students us In this unique comparative study the editors have brought together an international team of researchers from eight countries to develop case studies which explore the processes of inclusion and exclusion within a school or group of schools set in its local and national context The study includes classroom observation the experiences of the school day of students and interviews with staff students parents and school governors Through an innovative juxtaposition of the case studies and commentaries on them differences of perspective within and between countries are revealed and analysed The study arose from a dissatisfaction with previous research which presents national perspectives or seeks findings that have global significance This book avoids such simplification and draws attention to the problems of translation of practice across cultures The editors start from an assumption of diversity of perspective which like the diversity of students within schools can be viewed as problematic or as a resource to be recognized and celebrated Special Needs Ministry for Children Pat Verbal,2012 Open your heart to the most amazing ministry a church can have Do you know what it takes to make these kids and their parents feel welcome in your church This practical insightful book is your guide to answering all those questions and more Packed with case studies and personal stories from recognized experts in the ministry field Learn Best ways to reach this group how to launch a special needs ministry in your church promote and recruit the right volunteers what families with special needs really need from you
