

Freudian Psychoanalytic Theory

Sigmund Freud (1856-1939) and his followers: The emphasis is on the unconscious determinants of behavior and the primacy of early childhood experiences, on the dynamic interaction of components of the psyche as they move through psychosexual stages of development, and on the use of defense mechanisms to protect the ego.

Freud's psychoanalytic model has three major components:
the structure of the personality
the defense mechanisms
the stages of psychosexual development

Freud's Structure of the Mind: id, ego, superego. "Smooth integration of these three components minimizes anxiety and intrapsychic conflicts. The underlying unconscious conflicts, the anxiety that results and the defense mechanisms activated result in neurosis or neurotic disorders. (The term neurosis was dropped from the DSM in 1980).

In Sigmund Freud's topographical model of personality, the ego is the aspect of personality that deals with reality. While doing this, the ego also has to cope with the conflicting demands of the id and the superego. The id seeks to fulfill all wants, needs, and impulses while the superego tries to get the ego to act in an idealistic and moral manner.

What happens when the ego cannot deal with the demands of our desires, the constraints of reality, and our own moral standards? According to Freud, anxiety is an unpleasant inner state that people seek to avoid. Anxiety acts as a signal to the ego that things are not going right.

Freud identified three types of anxiety:

Neurotic anxiety is the unconscious worry that we will lose control of the id's urges, resulting in punishment for inappropriate behavior.

Reality anxiety is fear of real-world events. The cause of this anxiety is usually easily identified. For example, a person might fear receiving a dog bite when they are near a menacing dog. The most common way of reducing this anxiety is to avoid the threatening object.

Moral anxiety involves a fear of violating our own moral principles.

Freud's theory of personality development is based on the idea that the mind is divided into three parts: the id, the ego, and the superego. The id is the part of the mind that is responsible for our basic drives and instincts, while the ego is the part that is responsible for our rational thought and decision-making. The superego is the part of the mind that is responsible for our moral and ethical beliefs.

Outside the Dream (RLE: Lacan) Martin Stanton, 2014-01-23 Originally published in 1983 Martin Stanton has written an intriguing and original guide to French styles of psychoanalysis He describes the development of psychoanalytic technique and shows how it has transformed the contemporary French literary and philosophical thought and writing as well as making inroads in the English speaking cultural world He argues that psychoanalysis has outgrown the individual setting and needs to evolve new methods of group work in this respect he believes it has a special role to play in educational institutions The book examines the grounds on which analysis has evolved subversive and deconstructive strategies and created radical alternatives It relates the Lacan effect on the psychoanalytic movement to long standing debates on patriarchy and authoritarianism and considers in a clinical section variant diagnoses of paranoia and schizophrenia It also discusses the future direction of psychoanalysis in the light of contemporary French research
