Strategies For Increasing Access And Performance In Higher Education:

Strategies for Increasing Access and Performance in Higher Education Jan Karel Koppen, Wolff-Dietrich Webler, 1993

Recent social changes have resulted in a rising demand for higher education in greater heterogeneity of student population and in new challenges in adapting academic and professional training to the needs of the European labor market National and institutional policies in most European countries are directed towards facilitating access to higher education and towards diversifying the educational provision However policy results show marked differences between countries and are limited by the relatively low effectiveness and efficiency of the system The further development of higher education faced with this challenge requires more and specific knowledge of the relations between system characteristics student characteristics and educational outcomes This book with selected contributions on access and performance supports this goal

Access to Higher Education Graeme Atherton, 2017-09-16 This book is the first systematic attempt to examine one of the biggest challenges facing universities and society in the 21st century how do we create opportunities to allow people from all social backgrounds to benefit from higher education It examines how policymakers higher education institutions and civil society organisations are meeting this challenge across the globe Each chapter focuses on one of 12 countries including the economically powerful US and Germany developing nations from Africa and South America and the new higher education superpowers of China and India Access to Higher Education shows that across these different nations inequalities in higher education participation are common but their nature differs It argues for a new nationhood based approach to understanding why these differences exist

Black Male Collegians: Increasing Access, Retention, and Persistence in Higher Education

Robert T. Palmer, J. Luke Wood, T. Elon Dancy, Terrell L. Strayhorn, 2014-06-24 Improving college access and success among Black males has garnered tremendous attention Many social scientists have noted that Black men account for only 4.3% of the total enrollment at 4 year postsecondary institutions in the United States the same percentage now as in 1976

Furthermore two thirds of Black men who start college never finish The lack of progress among Black men in higher education has caused researchers practitioners and policymakers to become increasingly focused on ways to increase their access and success Offering recommendations and strategies to help advance success among Black males this monograph provides a comprehensive synthesis and analysis of factors that promote the access retention and persistence of Black men at diverse institutional types e g historically Black colleges and universities predominantly White institutions and community colleges It delineates institutional policies programs practices and other factors that encourage the success of Black men in postsecondary education This is the 3rd issue of the 40th volume of the Jossey Bass series ASHE Higher Education Report Each monograph is the definitive analysis of a tough higher education issue based on thorough research of pertinent literature and institutional experiences Topics are identified by a national survey Noted practitioners and scholars are then commissioned to write the reports with experts providing critical reviews of each manuscript before publication
