Williams, 2017-03-02

One of the key themes of the Enlightenment was the search for universal laws and truths that would help illuminate the workings of the universe It is in such attitudes that we trace the origins of modern science and medicine However not all eighteenth century scientists and physicians believed that such universal laws could be found particularly in relation to the differences between living and inanimate matter From the 1740s physicians working in the University of Medicine of Montpellier began to contest Descartes s dualist concept of the body machine that was being championed by leading Parisian medical mechanists In place of the body machine perspective that sought laws universally valid for all phenomena the vitalists postulated a distinction being living and other matter offering a holistic understanding of the physical moral relation in place of mind body dualism Their medicine was not based on mathematics and the unity of the sciences but on observation of the individual patient and the harmonious activities of the body economy Vitalists believed that Illness was a result of disharmony in this body economy which could only be remedied on an individual level depending on the patient's own natural limitations The limitations were established by a myriad of factors such as sex class age temperament region and race which negated the use of a single universal treatment for a particular ailment Ultimately Montpellier medicine was eclipsed by that of Paris a development linked to the dynamics of the Enlightenment as a movement bent on cultural centralisation acquiring a reputation as a kind of anti science of the exotic and the mad Given the long standing Paris centrism of French cultural history Montpellier vitalism has never been accorded the attention it deserves by historians This study repairs that neglect
