Jones, 2004 Three teenage girls share their stories about life as students as young women with disabilities and as minorities in a male dominated special education school culture We Can't Go Home Again Clarence E. Walker, 2001-06-14 Afrocentrism has been a controversial but popular movement in schools and universities across America as well as in black communities But in We Can't Go Home Again historian Clarence E Walker puts Afrocentrism to the acid test in a thoughtful passionate and often blisteringly funny analysis that melts away the pretensions of this therapeutic mythology As expounded by Molefi Kete Asante Yosef Ben Jochannan and others Afrocentrism encourages black Americans to discard their recent history with its inescapable white presence and to embrace instead an empowering vision of their African specifically Egyptian ancestors as the source of western civilization

Walker marshals a phalanx of serious scholarship to rout these ideas. He shows for instance that ancient Egyptian society was not black but a melange of ethnic groups and questions whether in any case the pharaonic regime offers a model for blacks today asking if everybody was a King who built the pyramids. But for Walker Afrocentrism is more than simply bad history; it substitutes a feel good myth of the past for an attempt to grapple with the problems that still confront blacks in a racist society. The modern American black identity is the product of centuries of real history as Africans and their descendants created new hybrid cultures mixing many African ethnic influences with native and European elements. Afrocentrism replaces this complex history with a dubious claim to distant glory. Afrocentrism offers not an empowering understanding of black Americans' past, Walker concludes, but a pastiche of alien traditions held together by simplistic fantasies. More to the point, this specious history denies to black Americans the dignity and power that springs from an honest understanding of their real history. I won't let them be like me R. Latham Lechowick, 2024-03-11

Ezidi people, Yazidi Yazidi and their culture suffered greatly at the hands of Daesh before, during and after the 2014 Sinjar Shingal Genocide. Since the resulting forced migration, the Ezidi community, as one of the most marginalised societies in the Middle East, has undergone a significant amount of society-wide transformation. New avenues for agency have opened and Shingali Ezidi women have taken these opportunities to express transformed identities, filling spaces previously unavailable and altering traditional gender roles. This first extensive ethnographic work ever conducted with Ezidi women examines origins and developments of transformations in their female identity and agency. The analysis of their expressions and performances is particularly notable because of the subaltern position under numerous layers of minority, e.g. ethnicity, geography, religion, politics, culture, language, as well as gender. The aim of this study is to investigate the utilisation of subaltern identity to actualise agency among women after genocide. The Literary World, 1875. Animating Expressive Characters for Social Interaction Lola Cañamero, Ruth Aylett, 2008. Animated interactive characters and robots that are able to function in human social environments are being developed by a large number of research groups worldwide. Emotional expression as a key element of human social interaction and communication is often added in an attempt to make them appear more natural to us. How can such artefacts be given emotional displays that are believable and acceptable to humans? This is the central question of Animating Expressive Characters for Social Interaction. The ability to express and recognize emotions is a fundamental aspect of social interaction. Not only is it a central research question, it has been explored in animated films, dance and other expressive arts for a much longer period. This book is unique in presenting a multi-disciplinary approach to animation in its broadest sense, from internal mechanisms to external displays, not only from a graphical perspective but more generally examining how to give characters an anima so that they appear as life-like entities and social partners to humans.
