

WHAT IS A PACEMAKER?

A pacemaker is a battery operated electrical device that connects to your heart with lead wires, that assists your heart by regulating its rhythm, to regulate slow heartbeat (bradycardia), fast heartbeat (tachycardia), or irregular heartbeat (arrhythmia) that can be dangerous or fatal if not corrected.

WHAT MEDICAL DIAGNOSES CAN LEAD TO PACEMAKER PLACEMENT?

A medical team might recommend a pacemaker if you take beta blocker medications (which slow the heart) or one of several diagnoses that may lead to an arrhythmia, including sick sinus syndrome, atrial fibrillation (A-Fib), heart attack, heart block, congenital heart disease, or a heart transplant. The most dangerous can be a slow heartbeat, especially if it causes symptoms like fainting, dizziness, or shortness of breath.

WHAT HAPPENS DURING PACEMAKER SURGERY?

Pacemaker surgery is considered a minor procedure with a very high success rate. The surgeon starts by threading the necessary wires through a vein near your shoulder (usually your nondominant side). Once the wires are in place, he or she makes a small incision, connects the wires to the pacemaker device, test that all is properly functioning, and sew the incision closed.

HOW DOES HAVING A PACEMAKER AFFECT DAILY LIFE?

Generally, after the initial healing process is complete and you are cleared by your doctor, you may resume all normal activities including rigorous exercise, travel, sexual activity, etc. However, there are a few things to keep in mind long term when you have a pacemaker.

- Plan for regular checks with your doctor, which will eventually include a battery and generator replacement.
- You will need to avoid magnetic and electric signals including MRI machines, TENS units, diathermy, generators, welders, power lines, jumper cables, and prolonged use of metal detectors.
- Cell phones or other similar devices should stay 6 inches from your device.
- Household items that will not affect a pacemaker include computers, radios, TV, kitchen appliances, WiFi devices, electric blankets, Bluetooth technology, and hair dryers.

STATISTICS ABOUT PACEMAKERS:

- 400,000 pacemaker implantation surgeries occur in the United States every year.
