Natural Environment and Culture in the Mediterranean Region II Ibrahim Atalay, Recep Efe, Munir Ozturk, 2011-05-25 The Mediterranean Basin is the largest of the five Mediterranean climate regions and one of the largest archipelagos in the world The basin is located at the intersection of two major landmasses Eurasia and Africa and has around five thousand islands which contribute much to its high diversity and spectacular scenery It possesses higher salinity than the Atlantic The shores are chiefly mountainous Earthquakes and volcanic disturbances are frequent Some of the most ancient civilizations flourished around the region Carthagians Greeks Sicilians and Romans were rivals for dominance of its shores and trade The basin virtually became a Roman lake under the Roman Empire Later the region was dominated by the Byzantines and the Arabs The development of the northern regions of Africa and of oil fields in the Middle East has increased its trade The flora is dramatic with over 20 thousand endemic vascular plant taxa and many endemic species of animals Fish about 400 species sponges and corals are plentiful The touristic activities are threatening populations of many species The fragmentation and isolation is increasing due to resort development and infrastructure The overuse of the sea s natural and marine resources continues to be a problem The Mediterranean monk seal the barbary macaque and the Iberian lynx which is Critically Endangered are among the region's imperiled species The Natural West Dan Flores, 2003-03-30 The Natural West offers essays reflecting the natural history of the American West as written by one of its most respected environmental historians. Developing a provocative theme, Dan Flores asserts that Western environmental history cannot be explained by examining place, culture, or policy alone but should be understood within the context of a universal human nature. The Natural West entertains the notion that we all have a biological nature that helps explain some of our attitudes towards the environment. Flores also explains the ways in which various cultures, including the Comanches, New Mexico Hispanos, Mormons, Texans, and Montanans, interact with the environment of the West. Gracefully moving between the personal and the objective, Flores intersperses his writings with literature, scientific theory, and personal reflection. The topics cover a wide range from historical human nature regarding animals and exploration to the environmental histories of particular Western bioregions and finally to Western restoration as the great environmental theme of the twenty-first century.
