Schemes Douglas C. Montgomery, GEORGIA INST OF TECH ATLANTA SCHOOL OF INDUSTRIAL AND SYSTEMS ENGINEERING., 1981 A review of procedures for designing acceptance sampling plans and process control schemes according to economic criteria is given The use of nonstatistical criteria to design these procedures has been the subject of considerable research and a number of different process models and procedures have been developed A comparison of the major approaches to model formulation and design and a discussion of the practical implementation of these techniques is the primary focus of this paper Author Optimal Design of Acceptance Sampling Plans for Process Variables with Inverse Gaussian Distributions Krishna Mohan Kanchibhatta, 1998 Economic Design of Acceptance Sampling Plans Based on Conforming Run Lengths Using Loss Functions M. S. Fallah Nezhad, A. Ahmadi Yazdi, 2014 In this paper a new sampling plan is introduced based on the run length of conforming items and Taguchi loss function Run length of conforming items is used for decision making about the quality of a lot The proposed sampling plan is based on the Markov modeling A continuous Taguchi loss function is used to obtain loss of deviations between the value of quality characteristics and its target An optimization model is developed for obtaining the optimal control tolerances and the corresponding critical acceptance and rejection thresholds based on the geometric distribution which minimizes the loss function for both producers and consumers For practical purpose a numerical example is presented to illustrate how the proposed procedure can be applied to design acceptance sampling plans In addition the results of a comparison study denoted the merits of proposed model At the end a general model regarding the risk of consumer and producer is developed A sensitivity analysis is carried out on the different values of the required parameters in order to validate the results of optimization model
