Maura D. Murphy, 2016 Although common phrases such as "Those who can't do teach" may suggest otherwise, teachers have a job of incredible importance. For my thesis, I wanted to provide teachers with the opportunity to share what the field of education is like from their perspective. A conversation is going on today regarding how we can improve America's academic standing internationally among schools. I was curious what would happen if teachers were given the microphone for a change, and the following paper is filled with the firsthand experiences of teachers who rose to the challenge. In addition to the interview questions of qualitative inquiry, I included an interesting piece of quantitative data as well. Teachers were given the chance to explain specific experiences that sum up their teaching experience and then were given the opportunity to rate their job satisfaction on a scale of one to ten. The results are enlightening. I hope that you enjoy reading these stories and can take away a small appreciation for all that teachers do for our children, siblings, and friends. A Teacher Affects Eternity

When I was in first grade, I had to move from California to Washington in the middle of the school year. We were about to finish our textbook, Gingerbread Men and Helicopters, and I was going to miss cooking a gingerbread man with my class. My favorite teacher of all time, Mrs. Washburnt, surprised me on my last day of school with my very own gingerbread man. Some 40 years later, this remains one of my fondest childhood memories. You're probably thinking about your own story with one of your favorite teachers. Teachers are often unrecognized heroes of our communities. The A Teacher Affects Eternity: She Can Never Tell Where Her Influence Stops notebook was created in honor of Mrs. Washburnt and all of the other Super Teachers out there who have dared to educate and inspire the rest of us.
