Teachers' Career and Promotion Patterns Taylor & Francis Group, 2018-10-28      Teachers' Career and Promotion Patterns Rupert Maclean, 2019-08-13 First published in 1992 this book shows that despite appearances and beliefs to the contrary teachers go in for career planning just as systematically as the members of any other profession and that the career movement of teachers is patterned not random It demonstrates that status and rewards matter but so do teaching locations and conditio

Teacher's Career & Promotional Patterns Rupert MacLean, 1991-10      Social and Learning Relationships in Primary Schools Alison Kington, Karen Blackmore, 2020-09-17 One of the most important factors in pupils success in school are the relationships developed with teachers and other children Not only are these relationships important in their own right but they have considerable bearing on pupil motivation achievement and on their perceptions of themselves as learners Social and Learning Relationships in Primary Schools is based upon but not confined by recent research projects focused on a range of relationships that exist within English primary schools This text provides substantial evidence and rich insights into the development and ongoing influences on these social and learning relationships relating to both the academic and affective outcomes of pupils The book is presented in four parts i social interaction and the curriculum ii classroom relationships and the impact on learning iii professional identity and professional development and iv individual differences and inclusion Through these sections the authors identify important features of primary schooling including for example delivery of the core subjects learning environment role of student teachers in schools classroom technology and the transition between phases of education They examine a number of social psychological influences on these relationships in terms of career phase professional identity adult child and peer relationships and self efficacy and provide powerful evidence of the complexities of primary school life Drawing together the perspectives of a number of authors all of whom have served as practising teachers as well as gaining a wealth of experience in the higher education sector Social and Learning Relationships in Primary Schools offers a detailed and holistic understanding of the influences that shape learning policy and practice in this context

Asian Teachers in British Schools Paul Avtar Singh Ghuman, 1995-01-01 There is scarcity of research and literature on ethnic minority teachers This book makes a contribution towards the understanding of the personal and professional concerns of Asian teachers of two generations the older generation who migrated to Britain during the 60s and 70s and the younger generation the majority of whom were born and educated in the UK Three salient issues emerged from the inquiry which are interlinked Firstly the older generation felt that their professional development and promotion have been seriously affected by the degree of racism which they have met from some of their white colleagues Secondly the majority of younger generation Asian teachers prefer to teach in multicultural schools which has far reaching consequences for the development of a tolerant and just multicultural society Lastly the younger generation s perceived anxiety and apprehension namely that they would meet racism in all white schools

International Handbook of Lifelong Learning David N. Aspin, Judith Chapman, Michael Hatton, Yukiko Sawano, 2012-12-06 Recent changes in the world effected by the transformations of information technology globalisation and the move towards a knowledge economy over the last thirty years have been as radical and fundamental as the changes resulting from the invention of the wheel and the printing press We are now living in a new age in which the demands are so complex so multifarious and so rapidly changing that the only way in which we shall be able to survive them is by committing to a process of individual communal and global learning throughout the lifespan of all of us A number of international bodies and agencies have taken cognisance of these transformations and the demands they impose upon societies and communities of the twenty first century and have developed and articulated policies intended to enable all citizens of the world in the twenty first century to face these challenges It is now a declared policy of many governments and international agencies that the only vehicle for such preparation is education education education and that preparing for the knowledge economy and the learning society of the future has to be a lifelong undertaking an investment in the future that is not restricted merely to the domain of economic advancement but also to those of social inclusion and personal growth Realising this policy makers across the international arena are grappling with the need to move from systems that emphasise education and training to the radically more unworked construct of lifelong learning In this volume the editors and authors analyse criticise and rework the ideas principles and theories underpinning policies and programs of lifelong learning re interpreting them in the light of examples of best practice found in a range of educating institutions around the world We believe that students of educational change and community development will find it useful and helpful to have available in this volume some of the most up to date thinking on the chief concepts theories and values of increasing policy interest in lifelong learning together with a review of some significant examples of the different forms focuses and nexuses of thought and practice on this topic All this enables us to offer some policy recommendations and practical suggestions as to ways forward in the endeavour to make lifelong learning a reality for all
