2.3 Physical therapy PT is a standard of care for these patients post meniscectomy but research is conflicting on the benefits and the most appropriate outcome measures to use when assessing activity levels in these patients The main purpose of this dissertation was to explore 5 performance based outcome measure single limb single hop test for distance SLHT single limb crossover hop test for distance CHT Edgren side step test ESST Illinois agility test IAT and stair measure test SMT 3 of which were recommended by the clinical practice guidelines CPGs for meniscal lesions in order to provide information on the reliability and validity of these measures for patients after meniscectomy A secondary purpose of this dissertation was to identify the differences in outcomes between patients with degenerative meniscus tears and non degenerative meniscus tear by investigating recovery post arthroscopic partial meniscectomy A convenience sample of patients who underwent an arthroscopic partial meniscectomy were recruited from the University of Miami Hospital sports medicine clinic Subjects were categorized into one of two groups based on whether their meniscus tear was degenerative or not Subjects were treated by one of five physical therapists The rehabilitation protocol consisted of 45 minutes to 1 hour of PT 2-3x week for a total of 8 weeks A general protocol was followed for the first 4 weeks of rehabilitation and an individualized protocol was incorporated into the final 4 weeks of rehabilitation Assessments were performed at initial PT evaluation week 0 at four weeks post meniscectomy week 4 and 8 weeks post meniscectomy week 8 Comparisons were made
