

THE FIRST OREGON TRAIL

The first covered wagons came into the Rocky Mts. in 1830, they made their way as far west as Fort Washakie in Wyoming. Efforts were made to find passable wagon trails through the Mountains to the Pacific Coast, which goal was finally reached. At that time the entire northwest Mt. area was known as Oregon country, & western travel was either to the Oregon or the California regions, while early maps give the probable location of the first Oregon Trail north of here; well marked wagon ruts & stories of Indians & Settlers indicate the first wagon migration to Oregon followed the Southwesterly shores of Bear Lake, leaving this valley through a canyon to the Northwest, then to the upper reaches of the Bear river.

Additional color is given the belief because this was the site of an important Indian rendezvous as early as 1827, & well marked trails were followed by Indians north in & out of the valley.
