The New Handbook of Multisensory Processing Barry E. Stein, 2012-06-01 The major reference work for a rapidly advancing field synthesizes central themes reports on current findings and offers a blueprint for future research Scientists attempts to understand the physiology underlying our apprehension of the physical world was long dominated by a focus on the individual senses The 1980s saw the beginning of systematic efforts to examine interactions among different sensory modalities at the level of the single neuron. And by the end of the 1990s a recognizable and multidisciplinary field of multisensory processes had emerged. More recently studies involving both human and nonhuman subjects have focused on relationships among multisensory neuronal ensembles and their behavioral perceptual and cognitive correlates. The New Handbook of Multisensory Processing synthesizes the central themes in this rapidly developing area, reports on current findings, and offers a blueprint for future research. The contributions all of them written for this volume by leading experts reflect the evolution and current state of the field. This handbook does more than simply review the field. Each of the volume's eleven sections broadly surveys a major topic and each begins with a substantive and thought provoking commentary by the section editor that identifies the major issues being explored, describes their treatment in the chapters that follow, and sets these findings within the context of the existing body of knowledge. Together the commentaries and chapters provide an invaluable guide to areas of general agreement, unresolved issues, and topics that remain to be explored in this fast moving field.

Modularity and the Motor theory of Speech Perception Michael Studdert-Kennedy, Ignatius G. Mattingly, 2014-01-02. A compilation of the proceedings of a conference held to honor Alvin M Liberman for his outstanding contributions to research in speech perception, this volume deals with two closely related and controversial proposals for which Liberman and his colleagues at Haskins Laboratories have argued forcefully over the past 35 years. The first is that articulatory gestures are the units not only of speech production but also of speech perception; the second is that speech production and perception are not cognitive processes but rather functions of a special mechanism. This book explores the implications of these proposals not only for speech production and speech perception but for the neurophysiology of language, language acquisition, higher level linguistic processing, the visual perception of phonetic gestures, the production and perception of sign language, the reading process, and learning to read. The contributors to this volume include linguists, psycholinguists, speech scientists, neurophysiologists, and ethologists. Liberman himself responds in the final chapter.

Hearing Science and Hearing Disorders M.E. Lutman, 2014-06-28. Hearing Science and Hearing Disorders focuses on the nature of the processes in the inner ear and the nervous system that mediate hearing. Organized into eight chapters, this book first discusses the nature of speech communication, the extent of hearing problems, and the pathophysiology of hearing. Four core chapters follow in which four areas of central importance to understanding hearing disorders and their effects are covered. These areas are: assessment of auditory function, the scope for technological solutions, the nature of audio visual speech perception, and the effects of deafness upon speech production. This book will be valuable to students, to academic and professional workers concerned with hearing, speech, and their disorders, and to scientifically or medically literate people in general.
