of the Elementary School Subjects Harold Ordway Rugg,1926 Implementing Evidence-Based Academic Interventions in School Settings Sylvia Rosenfield,Virginia Wise Berninger,2009-02-26 Designed for both researchers and practitioners this book is a guide to bridging the gap between the knowledge generated by scientific research and application of that knowledge to educational practice With the emphasis on evidence based practice in the schools growing exponentially school practitioners must learn how to understand judge and make use of the research being produced to full effect Conversely researchers must understand what is being used in real world settings and what is still needed The editors of this book have outlined this process as a series of steps beginning with being a critical consumer of current research literature followed by concepts to consider in translating research into practice systems issues at local district and state levels the role of teachers in program implementation evaluation of implementation effectiveness and preservice and inservice professional development of teachers and psychologists Each chapter is written by leaders on the topic and contributors include both researchers and school based practitioners With contributing authors from a variety of disciplines this book is an invaluable treatise on current understanding of the complexities of translating research into educational practice Frontiers in the Acquisition of Literacy Claire M. Fletcher-Flinn,2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science experimental psychology and education The purpose of this Research Topic is to summarize and review what has been accomplished so far and to further explore these general issues Contributions from different perspectives are welcomed and could include theoretical computational and empirical works that focus on the acquisition of literacy including cross orthographic research

Learning to Read across Languages and Writing Systems Ludo Verhoeven, Charles Perfetti, 2017-10-12 Around the world children embark on learning to read in their home language or writing system But does their specific language and how it is written make a difference to how they learn How is learning to read English similar to or different from learning in other languages Is reading alphabetic writing a different challenge from reading syllabic or logographic writing Learning to Read across Languages and Writing Systems examines these questions across seventeen languages representing the world's different major writing systems Each chapter highlights the key features of a specific language exploring research on learning to read spell and comprehend it and on implications for education The editors introduction describes the global spread of reading and provides a theoretical framework including operating principles for learning to read The editors final chapter draws conclusions about cross linguistic universal trends and the challenges posed by specific languages and writing systems
