The Natural Musician Dina Kirnarskaya, 2009-06-11 One of the great mysteries of music is how it affects us in multitude of ways Whether talking about our individual tastes as listeners or individual differences as performers what are the psychological qualities that can turn some people into great musicians but not others Is it down to genes sheer hard work or some other quality in the individual The Natural Musician is the story of how we become composers performers or just discriminating listeners It searches for those psychological traits essential for turning one into a musician Unlike many others Kirnarskaya does believe in the existence of talent but argues that it is due to multiplicative factors which she describes analyses and shows how to test She also sheds light on the essence and origins of perfect pitch examines the triumphs and tortures of musical prodigies and considers the implications of her theories for the teaching of music After a foreword from the legendary conductor Gennady Rodhestvensky the book looks at our basic musical faculties how we perceive sounds distinguish their pitch and structure and recognise rhythm It then examines the nature of musical empathy what it is that allows us to perceive and emotionally connect with music The second part of the book focuses on the creative processes behind writing music The third section deals with music education looking at the role of innate and inherited characteristics in the formation of talent and considering why many who excel at an early age burn out later on The book ends exploring how musical development can shape the human brain strengthening other cognitive faculties including those unrelated to music This is a book that will fascinate anyone with an interest in music and musicians from the fields of music psychology and education to musicians themselves whether amateur and professional

Play to your strengths when presenting Mark Laudi, 2024-08-01 Why do people still struggle with public speaking when there are many books and courses on the subject There are two reasons for this Most presentation skills coaches are by definition gregarious extroverts who love nothing more than to be on stage or on camera Yet people who need presentation skills coaching do so precisely because they are not gregarious extroverts Trying to teach introverts to be extroverts is an effort in futility Most presentation skills books are focused on tactics without taking presenters unique personalities into account That's like teaching right handers to write with their left hand and vice versa This book celebrates who you are It is about recognizing that everyone is different It is about listening to your concerns about getting on stage speaking on camera or even just networking at a business event It is about offering well honed tactics that fit in with the person you are without telling you to become somebody you're not. No matter what personality you have, you can communicate. You can present. You can present well.

Performing Math Andrew Fiss, 2020-11-13. Performing Math tells the history of expectations for math communication and the conversations about math hatred and math anxiety that occurred in response. Focusing on nineteenth-century American colleges, this book analyzes foundational tools and techniques of math communication: the textbooks that supported reading aloud; the burnings that mimicked pedagogical speech; the blackboards that accompanied oral presentations; the plays that proclaimed performers' identities as math students; and the written tests that redefined student performance. Math communication and math anxiety went hand in hand as new rules for oral communication at the blackboard inspired student revolt and as frameworks for testing student performance inspired performance anxiety. With unusual primary sources from over a dozen educational archives, Performing Math argues for a new performance-oriented history of American math education, one that can explain contemporary math attitudes and provide a way forward to reframing the problem of math anxiety.
