Masterful Women Kirsten E. Wood, 2005-12-15 Many early nineteenth century slaveholders considered themselves masters not only over slaves but also over the institutions of marriage and family According to many historians the privilege of mastery was reserved for white males But as many as one in ten slaveholders sometimes more was a widow and as Kirsten E Wood demonstrates slaveholding widows between the American Revolution and the Civil War developed their own version of mastery Because their husbands wills and dower law often gave women authority over entire households widowhood expanded both their domestic mandate and their public profile They wielded direct power not only over slaves and children but also over white men particularly sons overseers and debtors After the Revolution southern white men frequently regarded powerful widows as direct threats to their manhood and thus to the social order By the antebellum decades however these women found support among male slaveholders who resisted the popular claim that all white men were by nature equal regardless of wealth Slaveholding widows enjoyed material legal and cultural resources to which most other southerners could only aspire The ways in which they did and did not translate those resources into social political and economic power shed new light on the evolution of slaveholding society
