Information Science in Action: System Design Anthony Debons, Arvid G. Larson, 2012-12-06 In August 1978 one hundred or so scholars from several countries around the world met in Crete Greece to discuss the progress made in designing information systems and the relation of information science to this activity This was the Third Advanced Study Institute supported by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Brussels Belgium The first Institute was conducted in 1972 and held in Seven Springs Pennsylvania The results of this Institute were published by Marcel Dekker and titled Information Science Search for Identity The second Institute was held at the College of Librarianship Aberystwyth Wales in the summer of 1974 The proceedings were published by Noordhoff International Publishing Leyden The Netherlands entitled Perspectives of Information Science edited by A Debons and Hilliam Cameron The three institutes that were conducted shared a common purpose namely to assess the state of affairs of information science and to share this assessment with international community Information science can be said to have emerged during the past two three decades in response to the significant increase in data knowledge processing technology the growth of knowledge as the result of these trends and the increase in problem solving decision making complexity that faced all institutions at all levels throughout the world Information systems for many reasons remain as an abstraction Nevertheless considerable funds and human efforts are being expended on them Thus such systems are of vital concerns to both scientists and technologists who are involved in them

A Style Manual for Citing Microform and Nonprint Media Eugene B. Fleischer, 1978 The Intellectual Foundation of Information Organization Elaine Svenonius, 2009-01-30 Integrating the disparate disciplines of descriptive cataloging subject cataloging indexing and classification the book adopts a conceptual framework that views the process of organizing information as the use of a special language of description called a bibliographic language Instant electronic access to digital information is the single most distinguishing attribute of the information age The elaborate retrieval mechanisms that support such access are a product of technology But technology is not enough The effectiveness of a system for accessing information is a direct function of the intelligence put into organizing it Just as the practical field of engineering has theoretical physics as its underlying base the design of systems for organizing information rests on an intellectual foundation The subject of this book is the systematized body of knowledge that constitutes this foundation Integrating the disparate disciplines of descriptive cataloging subject cataloging indexing and classification the book adopts a conceptual framework that views the process of organizing information as the use of a special language of description called a bibliographic language The book is divided into two parts The first part is an analytic discussion of the intellectual foundation of information organization The second part moves from generalities to particulars presenting an overview of three bibliographic languages work languages document languages and subject languages It looks at these languages in terms of their vocabulary semantics and syntax The book is written in an exceptionally clear style at a level that makes it understandable to those outside the discipline of library and information science
