

A Falling Star

It saw amongst a bed of stars that twinkled in the sky
A falling star like one of ours
That fell from way up high

Gifts from heaven; that's what they are
That God is sharing here
If I could catch a falling star I'd know my Lord was near

I bow my head; hope and pray for one to go astray
In hopes a star would ricochet and one would fall my way

In the eyes of a beholder
The thought is so divine
My long life is getting older Hoping; this catch be mine

Star Dust Frank Bidart, 2005-06-15 In 2002 Frank Bidart published a sequence of poems Music Like Dirt the first chapbook ever to be a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize From the beginning he had conceived this sequence as the opening movement in a larger structure now with Star Dust finally complete Throughout his work Bidart has been uniquely alert to the dramatic possibilities of violence in this and in his sense of theater he resembles the great Jacobean dramatists It is no accident that Webster's plays echo in The Third Hour of the Night the brilliant long poem that dominates the second half of Star Dust Bidart locates in Benvenuto Cellini the speaker truest to his own vision Who better to speak of the drive to create not as reverie or pleasure or afterthought but as task and burden thwarted by the world In its scale sonorities extraordinary leaps and juxtapositions The Third Hour of the Night makes an astonishing counterbalance to the intense spare lyrics that precede it In this profound and unforgettable new book the dream beyond desire which now seems to represent human destiny is rooted in the drive to create a drive tormented at every stage by failure as the temporal being fights for its survival by making an eternal life Bidart is a poet of passionate originality and Star Dust shows that the forms of this originality continue to deepen and change as he constantly renews his contract with the idea of truth Star Dust is a 2005 National Book Award Finalist for Poetry
