Abstract

Economics is a subject offered at the Further Education and Training (FET) section in South Africa, the subject has recorded performance that is not impressive, and the low enrolment and statistics of pass rate are of major concern. Therefore this paper explores the teachers' content knowledge and strategies used to teach Economics in some selected schools in South Africa. The paper adopts a qualitative approach to phenomenological research design. Purposive sampling techniques were used to select 12 teachers from six schools, two teachers from each school in Buffalo City Municipality in East London, South Africa. A semi-structured interview was used to elicit information from the respondents. The findings among others revealed that Economics is very useful to be a better citizen and to make rational life decisions, the use of the right pedagogy can improve performance, and the content knowledge with adequate on-the-job training will be a match in delivering the content of the subject. It is concluded that a low level of understanding of the basic Economics concepts could be attributed, to less professional development training of Economics teachers in content knowledge and pedagogy. It is recommended among others that the Economics teacher have to strike a balance between theory and practice. Teachers should be innovative and improvise by using technological skills, they should move towards the use of technology as a tool to enable learners to become creative, empathetic and high-order thinkers in this digital world.

1. Introduction

In post-apartheid South Africa, the government and education officials attempted to address and redress the educational inequalities of the past education system. However, to date education system in South Africa remains a challenging and argumentative subject to many. Amnesty International South Africa (2020) revealed that the South African education system, is marked by disintegrating infrastructure, overloaded classrooms, and relatively poor educational outcomes and this perpetuates inequality and thus fails many of its children (learners). Early in 2021, in a press release, Amnesty International announced that the COVID-19 pandemic has plunged South Africa into further crisis, exposing the country's education system continues to be shaped by the apartheid legacy declaring that "a child's experience of education in South Africa is still dependent on where they are born how wealthy they are, and the colour of their skin".

The fact of the matter is that the world we are living in is exposed to multifarious economic challenges. Teaching Economics in South Africa is a viable solution to addressing these challenges. Because Economics aims at educating people (learners) on how to competently and efficiently utilize scarce public and private resources to satisfy their needs. Apart from this fact, it has to teach our learners how to manage their monies and resources, (Ojo & Jeannin, 2016). In this regard, van Wyk (2015) insists that teaching economics in schools should create responsible citizens and effective decision-makers. However, it is an important subject that many of our nation's schools tend to overlook, (Vandeyar & Swart, 2015). The importance of Economics in education goes far beyond the goal of improving an understanding of the basic principles of supply and demand, and how the economy works, (van Wyk, 2015), creating responsible citizens who will become effective decision-makers. This emphasizes the prominence of Economics pedagogy in teaching and learning Economics in schools on improving an understanding of Economics in schools and also how can new knowledge be generated to expose learners to real-life learning environments and experiences.

Teaching Economics Ronald A. Banaszak, Dennis C. Brennan, 1983 International Handbook on Teaching and Learning Economics Gail Mitchell Hoyt, KimMarie McGoldrick, 2012

The International Handbook on Teaching and Learning Economics is a power packed resource for anyone interested in investing time into the effective improvement of their personal teaching methods and for those who desire to teach students how to think like an economist. It sets guidelines for the successful integration of economics into a wide variety of traditional and non traditional settings in college and graduate courses with some attention paid to primary and secondary classrooms. The International Handbook on Teaching and Learning Economics is highly recommended for all economics instructors and individuals supporting economic education in courses in and outside of the major. This Handbook provides a multitude of rich resources that make it easy for new and veteran instructors to improve their instruction in ways promising to excite an increasing number of students about learning economics. This Handbook should be on every instructor's desk and referenced regularly.

Tawni Hunt Ferrarini, The American Economist. In delightfully readable short chapters by leaders in the sub fields who are also committed teachers, this encyclopedia of how and what in teaching economics covers everything. There is nothing else like it and it should be required reading for anyone starting a teaching career and for anyone who has been teaching for fewer than 50 years.

Daniel S Hamermesh, University of Texas Austin, US. The International Handbook on Teaching and Learning Economics provides a comprehensive resource for instructors and researchers in economics, both new and experienced. This wide ranging collection is designed to enhance student learning by helping economic educators learn more about course content, pedagogic techniques and the scholarship of the teaching enterprise. The internationally renowned contributors present an exhaustive compilation of accessible insights into major research in economic education across a wide range of topic areas including Pedagogic practice, teaching techniques, technology use, assessment, contextual techniques and K-12 practices. Research findings, principles, courses, measurement factors influencing student performance, evaluation and the scholarship of teaching and learning, Institutional administrative issues, faculty development, the undergraduate and graduate student and international perspectives, Teaching enhancement initiatives, foundations, organizations and workshops. Grounded in research and covering past and present knowledge as well as future challenges, this detailed compendium of economics education will prove an invaluable reference tool for all involved in the teaching of economics: graduate students, new teachers, lecturers, faculty, researchers, chairs, deans and directors.

Teaching Economics in the Primary Grades Yana Rodgers, Shelby Hawthorne, Ronald C. Wheeler, 2004. Primary grade students can gain exposure to the full range of economic concepts in state standards if teachers use reading based strategies that embrace children's literature with economic content. This approach allows teachers to simultaneously teach their students to read and to understand economics. Our state by state survey indicates that almost all states have content standards in economics beginning with kindergarten. However, only six states have standards that earn an A in our State Grade for Completeness In evaluating reading based strategies to teach these standards we identify more than two hundred picture books and easy readers that focus on economics Despite the appeal of teaching economics through literature there is not enough assessment of reading based strategies and new assessments should be attempted in the early grades Teaching Economics in Troubled Times Mark C.
