original buildings still in place Ashby saw a century of renewed growth starting in 1880 when Bostonians arrived during the summer to escape the heat and unhealthy city air A number of businesses including inns and tearooms catered to these wealthy visitors With the arrival of the automobile residents gained access to jobs in the surrounding mill towns It was during this time that the last of Ashby s many mills closed the first public library was built and one room classrooms were combined to become a central town school Today one can still stand on the town common in front of the 1809 meetinghouse and look over an area that has undergone little change in the past 170 years
