Understanding the Human Factor of the Energy Transition: Mechanisms Underlying Energy-Relevant Decisions and Behaviors Tobias Brosch,David Sander,Martin K. Patel,2016-06-27 An increasing number of countries are shifting toward sustainable energy economies emphasizing the use of renewable energy sources increases in energy efficiency and the abatement of greenhouse gas emissions The success of such an energy transition will depend not only on the development of new energy technologies but also on major changes in the patterns of individual energy related decisions and behaviors resulting in substantial reductions in energy demand Consequently the behavioral sciences can make important contributions to the energy transition by increasing our understanding of the multiple factors and mechanisms that underlie individual as well as group based decisions and behaviors in the energy domain and by creating a basis for systematic interventions that reduce energy usage Many different types of relevant behaviors and decisions need to be considered in this context including decisions to invest in energy efficient household equipment adjustments of energy critical habits related to heating eating or mode of transportation and participation in the political discourse related to questions of energy An integration of the expertise of the different disciplines of the behavioral sciences is thus needed to comprehensively investigate the impact of the different drivers and barriers that may determine energy related decisions and behaviors including economic factors such as price level social factors such as norms communication patterns and social learning processes and individual factors such as values attitudes beliefs heuristics affective biases and emotions The potential impact of these factors on the success of the energy transition is considerable for example a recent projection of the energy demand in Switzerland until 2050 has estimated the reduction potential related to psychological and sociological factors between 0% and 30% depending on which behavioral changes will be implemented in society Increased research efforts from the behavioral sciences are required to ensure that the full reduction potential can be achieved This Research Topic brings together contributions from different disciplines such as psychology affective science behavioral economics economics sociology consumer behavior business science sociology and political science that improve our understanding of the many factors underlying decision making and behavior in the energy domain and contribute to the development of targeted interventions that aim at reducing energy demand based on these factors The Human Factor to Profitability

Jeanette Kersten, Kelly La Venture, 2015-10-06 Building a People Centered Culture for Long Term Success The Human Factor to Profitability Building a People Centered Culture for Long Term Success explores the unique factors of organizational culture and climate that highlight the role and value of employees in any organization People spend most of their time at work and being an active participant in the culture and climate of their organization impacts the bottom line Organizations that promote such values as openness trust initiative teamwork collaboration creativity and empowerment obtain better results Having employees who are engaged motivated and happy at work results in higher productivity and profitability This book showcases the research practical application and testimonials of leaders who use a people centered process in their organizations Cyber Security And Human Factors: Keeping Information Safe Tarnveer Singh, 2023-05-24 Cyber

Security And Human Factors was released for free to help improve knowledge sharing in the sector The free distribution has helped Individuals and Organisations providing this handbook with detailed guidance on how to improve Cyber Security and Human Factors The human factor in Cyber Security is often seen as a weak link in the security chain But it is fair to say that human intuition all too often has also played a key role in preventing cyber threats materialising All systems require us humans to receive alerts and subject these to our interpretation Human intellect is capable of processing numerous inputs and we instinctively know when an issue has arisen We hope technology can improve our security posture when a superior tactic may be to dig deeper into human nature Our norms habits and quirks determine our security awareness We can change these and build a security mindset that focuses on our strength which is complex reasoning Our habits mean humans have tendency to find shortcuts Security professionals must think like a hectic employee a rushed director or a preoccupied secretary We must remove complexity from all of our practices Human brains process information in less time than many cybersecurity measures take to be implemented Smartphones productivity apps and fast connection speeds have set an expectation of instant access We also must consider the insider threat Human lives are complex and they bring this to the workplace They have stressors whether these are financial difficulties poor mental health drugs alcohol gambling idealism politics and power Leadership and human intuition can be vital in improving security Conducting a security review of employees once per month with colleagues from HR IT Operations etc can help identify staff who have too much access or staff who are struggling and need support Otherwise gathering intelligence on changes from these areas can also help Human reasoning can look at the situation from an enterprise perspective and spot warning signs earlier Malicious actors take advantage of human nature They target people who are vulnerable powerful or complacent Increasingly we see sophisticated techniques like using social media to develop something that will interest their target or get them to drop their defences The bad actors are evolving and so your security training program has to evolve Continually update about new threats Reminding people that they could be targeted Drive home the point to trust nothing Testing is an important part of education Send fake emails conduct hacking exercises play war games that simulate an attack or ransom situation Staff are fooled by these even when they know they could be tested These represent opportunities to embed learning points and encourage staff to take their time trust their instincts and validate Cyber threats arise increasingly from basic opportunities We can improve by understanding basic human nature Information security awareness should help establish correct security procedures and security principles in the minds of all employees Increased awareness minimizes user related security threats and maximizes the efficiency of security techniques But we must go beyond security awareness and better understand our people and their mindsets to be truly transformational The book has been written by a CISO and includes step by step guidance for successful cyber security in any organisation through better understanding the individuals within it It considers issues InfoSec leaders will encounter such as Cyber Security Cyber Safety Cyber Crime Information Security Management Cyber Vulnerabilities Cyber Attack Vectors Risk Management Business Continuity Security Education Awareness and Human Factors
