Lengerova,M. Vojtiskova,1971-10-29 Gene Mapping in Laboratory Mammals Part B Roy Robinson,2013-03-09 The present work is an attempt to provide a systematic treatment of genetic linkage in diploid heredity Part A presents a general account of statistical methods which can be brought to bear on the problem The primary emphasis is on the practical aspects of estimation A large proportion if not the majority of mutant genes fail to match up to textbook genes with faultless segregation ratios and expression yet these are the materials with which the practical researcher has to cope For this reason it is important to know how to deal with the assortment of genes which may display significant deviations from expectation Part B examines the accumulated data on linkage for most of the laboratory mammals and provides a comprehensive and up to date survey The need for a critical review has often been expressed and it is hoped that the present analysis will fill the gap The volume of material is probably the most important in the animal kingdom other than that for Drosophila species The Old Willow Tree and Other Stories Carl Ewald,2023-07-20 The Old Willow Tree and Other Stories by Carl Ewald is a captivating collection of short

Invasion Biology and Ecological Theory

Herbert H. T. Prins, Iain J. Gordon, 2014-01-23 Many conservationists argue that invasive species form one of the most important threats to ecosystems the world over often spreading quickly through their new environments and jeopardising the conservation of native species As such it is important that reliable predictions can be made regarding the effects of new species on particular habitats This book provides a critical appraisal of ecosystem theory using case studies of biological invasions in Australasia Each chapter is built around a set of eleven central hypotheses from community ecology which were mainly developed in North American or European contexts The authors examine the hypotheses in the light of evidence from their particular species testing their power in explaining the success or failure of invasion and accepting or rejecting each hypothesis as appropriate The conclusions have far reaching consequences for the utility of community ecology suggesting a rejection of its predictive powers and a positive reappraisal of natural history

The Coat Colors of Mice W.K.

Silvers, 2012-12-06 Many investigators seem to be fascinated by the coat colors of the mammals with which they work. This seems to be the case particularly for those utilizing isogenic strains of mice not only because such strains display widely different phenotypes but because scientists by definition are an inquisitive lot and it is sometimes difficult for the uninitiated to comprehend how such phenotypes are produced. This bewilderment becomes even more apparent if the investigator happens to be involved in breeding studies and a number of attractively colored animals quite different from the original stocks appear. Thus I can recall numerous occasions when my colleagues frequently working in areas completely unrelated to any aspect of genetics have come to me with an attractively pigmented animal or more likely with a population of segregating coat color types usually because they have not tended their animals properly and have ended up with a cage full of F₂S displaying a number of different colors. How they ask do such colors come about. While in some cases it is easy to take chalk in hand and explain what has been going on segregating and why in other cases it is virtually impossible. It is extremely difficult because while the interactions of many coat color factors obey the simple laws of heredity and of predictable gene interactions others do not.

Integrated Pest Management for Collections Peter

Windsor, David Pinniger, Louise Bacon, Bob Child, Kerren Harris, 2015-01-15 Integrated pest management IPM is not a static approach but one that is constantly evolving. Mass international travel climate change and other factors contribute to the spread of new pests and the pests themselves are constantly seeking out weaknesses in our defences. An understanding of the threats pests pose to collections and the necessity for a systematic approach to combat them is now firmly embedded in the work of collection care practitioners. In addition the trustees and sponsoring bodies of collecting institutions recognise that it is a significant and cost effective element of good collections management. 2011 A Pest Odyssey 10 years later describes examples of how the IPM approach has been adopted by large and small institutions around the world and highlights the many lessons learned along the way Principal among these is never to become complacent and tied down to routine processes Another important lesson is the need to ensure colleagues understand and are involved with the process of pest management There is also a need to understand the wider implications of any pest control activity for example the effect of chemical treatments on DNA Coming out of the second Pest Odyssey conference this book will promote wider understanding and implementation of IPM as an integral part of any collection management programme The organisers and editorial team hope that everyone involved with the care of cultural heritage collections and buildings will find something of interest and value in this work Chemical Signals in Vertebrates 9 Anna Marchlewska-Koj, John J. Lepri, Dietland

Müller-Schwarze, 2012-12-06 It is generally accepted that the recent progress in molecular and cellular biology would not have been possible without an understanding of the mechanisms and signaling pathways of communication inside the cell and between various cells of the animal organism In fact a similar progress occurred in the field of chemical communication between individual organisms of vertebrate species and this volume is aimed at presenting the current state of the art on this subject The reader can find here both original results obtained in the laboratory or field studies and comprehensive reviews summarizing many years of research The presentations of over 60 scientists have been grouped according to their approach into nine parts covering such fields as ecological and evolutionary aspects of chemical communication structure and neuronal mechanisms of chemosensory systems chemical structure of pheromones and binding proteins in individual and sexual recognition predator prey relationships purpose and consequences of marking behavior scent signals and reproductive processes Expanding on former volumes of this series entirely new chapters have been added on prenatal chemical communication describing specific effects of the intrauterine environment In many cases a truly multidisciplinary approach was required such as with the population analysis of polymorphic variants of the mouse's major urinary proteins that function in carrying pheromones
