The Learned Practice of Religion in the Modern University Donald Wiebe, 2019-11-14 In these essays Donald Wiebe unveils a significant problem in the academic study of religion in colleges and universities in North America and Europe that studies almost always exhibit a religious bias To explore this issue Wiebe looks at the religious and moral agendas behind the study of religion showing that the boundaries between the objective study of religion and religious education as a tool for bettering society have become blurred As a result he argues religious studies departments have fostered an environment where religion has become a learned or scholarly practice rather than the object of academic scrutiny This book provides a critical history of the failure of 20th and 21st century scholars to follow through on the 19th century ideal of an objective scientific study of religious thought and behaviour Although emancipated from direct ecclesiastical control and to some extent from sectarian theologizing Wiebe argues that research and scholarship in the academic department of religious studies has failed to break free from religious constraints He shows that an objective scientific study of religious thought and practice is not only possible but the only appropriate approach to the study of religious phenomena

The Study of Religion in British Columbia Brian J. Fraser, 2006-01-01 The Study of Religion in British Columbia is a story of enterprise innovation and isolation In this unique survey Brian J Fraser examines the history and development of the institutions of higher education where religion is taught and describes the methods used to understand the religious dimension of human endeavour in Canada's westernmost province Fraser analyzes the sources development and persistence of two distinct approaches to the study of religion in British Columbia theological studies and religious studies He traces the early strength and recent expansion of theological studies especially among conservative evangelical Christians and sets the creation of British Columbia's only department of religious studies at the University of British Columbia in this context He also describes the innovative curricula designed by several of the institutions for the study of religion in the province Finally he contends that the differing views on the nature of religion held by these institutions and their constituencies have led to a continuing isolation from each other The Study of Religion in British Columbia is the latest volume in the Canadian Corporation for the Study of Religion's series on the study of religion in Canada Readers interested in the rich diversity of personalities and perspectives that have shaped religious studies in British Columbia will find here a concise description of its evolution and a thought provoking examination of its significance
