Earp Butler, 2006-04 The 1854 war between Russia and Britain with its French and Turkish allies is known as the Crimean War from the location of its chief campaign But it is often forgotten that there was fighting in the northern Baltic Sea between British and Russian Naval forces This book is a full account of that sideshow based on the papers of the Senior British Naval officer Vice Admiral Sir C Napier not to be confused with his more famous military namesake Gen Sir Charles Napier There is a good reason for the oblivion that has befallen the Baltic campaign it was a total and unmitigated failure apart from the capture of some unfortunate Finns who subsequently died of fever in Lewes jail The purpose of this book is to exonerate Admiral Napier commander of the Baltic expedition from blame for the failure which the author G Butler Earp lays squarely at the doors of the Lords of the Admiralty for sending Napier with an inadequate run down fleet and for refusing to give him the necessary means mortars and gunboats to reduce the Russian ports and forts which he was expected to silence Earp forcefully defends Napier from charges of incompetence and near cowardice and equally forcefully attacks the Admiralty for cheeseparing and injustice It is a story of military versus political needs which has echoes to this day *The History of the Baltic Campaign of 1854, from Documents and Other Materials Furnished by Vice-Admiral Sir C.
